The amazing New York Islanders are on the verge of doing it again. Down 3-0 to the vaunted Philadelphia Flyers at one point in their best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final, the Islanders came from behind to score a 2-1 victory Sunday and tie the series 3-3. Deciding game is Tuesday in Philadelphia and if the Islanders can win that one, it will mark the second series in a row in which they've wiped out a 3-0 deficit. They did the same thing against Pittsburgh Penguins in the quarter-finals. Page 10.

FIRE AND FLOOD GREET FIREMEN

OTTAWA (CP) — Where there's smoke there's water?

Usually only after firemen arrive.

But when Diane Dunham's water-bed caught fire early today it flooded an apartment below and alerted neighbors. They arrived in time to revive an unconscious Miss Dunham and take her to Ottawa General Hospital, where later she was said to be in satisfactory condition.

The fire apparently started when a cigarette was dropped into the bed covers.

End Close in Laos As Military Yields

IT'S ENOUGH to make the dowager Empress Hotel shift her foundations to have her velvety lawns bruised by the crack of a croquet mallet. But these and stranger scenes will take place as Victorian Days draw closer. Vicki Neligan, seen taking a swing, and Howard Mitchell, behind her, are co-chairmen for the fifth annual Cotillion Ball, which takes place at the University of Victoria's Craigdarroch Hall on Friday. Watching the chairmen get in a little pre-ball exercise are, left to right, Karel de Roo, Holly Mitchell, Laurie Mitchell, Colette Wilkins, Dorothy Eng and Pat Mitchell. VIENTIANE, Laos (UPI) — The Communist Pathet Lao today asserted control of the loyalist (non-Communist) military forces in Laos and the right-wing army commander quickly fell in line with its dictates.

The Pathet Lao already had seized control of the cabinet, forcing the resignation of rightist members. Prince Souvanna Phouma, the neutralist premier, went on the radio to try to stem panic and public fears about the deteriorating situation.

Kham Quane Boupha, the new Pathet Lao defence minister, issued a communique demanding that "all officers and men should be prepared to follow my orders."

After the communique was broadcast on national radio the army commander, Lt.-Gen. Bounpone Makphepharak, ordered that Kham Quane's directives be followed and said any soldier not present for duty today would be considered a deserter.

Vietnamese, Indian and Chinese, fearful of a Communist takeover of the last non-Communist nation in Indochina, were fleeing the country in large numbers, severely disrupting its economy since they control most business here.

Meanwhile in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, officials of five non-Communist nations are drafting a blueprint for a neutral peace zone in Southeast Asia eliminating defence pacts with foreign powers.

The foreign ministers of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations were expected to vote on the plan this week at a three-day meeting in the Malaysian capital.

In Washington, a state department spokesman said there were no plans to evacuate the 1,000 Americans now in Laos.

The Communist move to take over the military came from Kham Quane Boupha, the new Pathet Lao defence minister. He issued a communique over national radio which forbade movements of loyalist troops or war equipment without defence ministry orders and warned of punitive action against any units that did not obey.

The communique also demanded military units declare their loyalty to the coalition government and the national political consultative council controlled by the Pathet Lao. The government's principal artillery, armor and logistic units immediately disavowed their ties with right-wing elements.

The announcement found loyalists in disarray with four rightist cabinet ministers who resigned over the weekend fled from the country and a growing number of military units disavowing the leadership of rightist generals. A fifth right-wing cabinet minister in Europe was not expected to return.

The Pathet Lao also accused Thailand of supporting a coup to overthrow the leftists in the coalition government but the statement brought a quick denial from the Thai government. Thai Prime Minister Kukrit Pramoj described as a fabrication reports Thailand had sent gunboats and artillery up the Mekong River to support such a coup.

Souvanna's brief radio message did not mention the political upheaval directly, nor did it give any indication of how he expected it would be re-

WALKOUTS SPREAD

Times News Services

MONTREAL — Wildcat walkouts halted work for a fifth day today at major Montreal construction sites, including the 1976 Olympic stadium facilities where city officials warned the threat to progress was becoming "very critical."

The Construction Association of Montreal and Quebec said the stoppages had spread to more than the 17 sites hit Friday and "we have no idea at all when they'll be back."

"The Olympic sites are still down," association general manager Robert Nuth said. "We haven't completed the count of how many projects are effected but it looks as if it'll top 25, at least."

Montreal executive committee chairman Lawrence Hanigan warned Sunday that every day lost through stoppages could affect the planned May 1976 opening of the $380 million stadium, centrepiece of next year's summer Olympic Games.

However, the organizing committee of the Olympics tried to reassure the public today that the Games will not be delayed by the work stoppage.

B.C. Indian Militancy Not Surprising—Paul

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

If British Columbia Indians are becoming militant and radical, no white man in this society should be surprised, says Indian leader Philip Paul.

The new mood is a direct result of "the poverty, the emptiness, the bitterness" he has seen in travels around the province, Paul said in an interview with the Times.

"It's a phenomenon that's happening," he said.

"It's got all the makings that turn out radicals."

Militancy is not part of the culture of B.C. Indians, Paul said, but poverty, the breakdown of traditional family structures, alcoholism and years of frustration are changing that.

Paul predicts a hot summer, with a continuation of the demonstrations and occupations of Indian affairs department offices already occurring in the interior.

He thinks Indians will start exercising their aboriginal rights to fish and hunt out of season and off the reserves, in defiance of the law.

"They (the public) are going to blame us (Indian leaders) for all the kinds of havoc that will happen," he said.

But this new militancy, which led Indian chiefs last month at Chilliwack to reject all further government funds, is a real movement among Indian people, not something created by a few radical leaders, he said.

"People who think we have to organize this are asleep," he said.

"We had control of the situation at one point ... but after the kind of things that have been happening, it's out of our hands now."

Paul, a Tsartlip Indian who lives on the Saanich Peninsula, is more moderate than radical.

He's university educated, has spent years dealing with governments at both the pro-

Occupation Ends

VANCOUVER (CP) — Members of the American Indian Movement who occupied the regional offices of the federal Indian affairs department Friday, had vanished today.

Departmental supervisors arrived at work today to find the offices empty and apparently in good order.

A spokesman for the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs said the AIM occupiers had arranged to hold a press conference at the union's offices today, presumably to announce further strategy.

Larry Wight, regional director of the department, had met with representatives of the attorney-general's department and police during the weekend in an attempt to get the occupiers out of the offices.

But he said when he came to work this morning that no conclusions had been reached, and it was a surprise to him that the occupation had ended.

Clerks and stenographers were ordered home by departmental surpervisors when the occupation began at 2 p.m. Friday.

During the weekend, shifts of between 15 and 30 Indians — men, women and children — sat in at the offices.

There was no violence during the takeover, although some war whoops were heard and the office echoed to the sound of tape-recorded Indian songs.

Canadian Firm Proposes Anacortes Tanker Terminal

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Trans Mountain Pipe Line Co. Ltd. of Vancouver has proposed building a deep-water oil supertanker terminal near Anacortes, Washington State, to protect its $6 million investment in pipelines in that area.

The proposal is one of three being considered by the Washington legislature's transportation committee.

The committee is continuing hearings on whether to let individual oil companies expand their own terminals for supertankers, approve the Trans Mountain proposal or construct a supertanker terminal just west of Port Angeles.

The committee has indicated interest in the Port Angeles proposal but this was before the Trans Mountain plan was made public.

Kenneth Hall, a Trans Mountain vice president, said today the immediate interest of the company in proposing to construct a $44.1 million terminal at Anacortes was to protect its investment in Washington State.

The company brings crude oil from Alberta to Vancouver and some is diverted south to Washington refineries. About 58 per cent of the crude oil goes south of the border. However, the Canadian government has told U.S. refineries this export would eventually be phased out.

Hall said a supertanker terminal at Anacortes would enable Trans Mountain to pump Alaska oil through its existing pipelines to nearby refineries.

He said the exact site of the terminal would be Burrows Bay where there is 120 feet of water, large enough to accommodate supertankers in the range of 325,000 deadweight tons, about twice the size of supertankers that would enter the area if each oil company operated independently.

However, there would be fewer tankers required.

From Burrows Bay, Trans Mountain would construct 7,000 feet of underwater pipeline and seven more miles of pipeline across Fidalgo Island. It would then join up with existing Trans Mountain pipeline at Anacortes.

Members of the Washington State transportation committee indicated that the Trans Mountain proposal might be superior to the plan by oil companies to go it alone. Mobil and Shell have applied for permission to expand their tanker terminals. Arco has

FIVE KIDNAPPED IN ISRAELI RAID

By Reuter

Israeli troops kidnapped five Lebanese in dawn raids on three villages in southern Lebanon today, official sources in Beirut said. They said that those kidnapped included a woman and a doctor.

The sources said an Israeli force infiltrated into the eastern area of Binh Jbeil, blew up a coffee shop and kidnapped its owner after searching his house.

They also kidnapped Dr. Ahmed Nurad, a local doctor who happened to be driving in the area at the time of the incident.

The sources said another Israeli force kidnapped the woman in a village. Two other persons were taken from another village.

The official in Binh Jbail said the Israeli force numbered about 100 men. He said four other Lebanese were taken from the villages of Ait el-Shaab and Ait Around after a house-to-house search.

'Looking At' Oil Royalties

Times News Services

NEW YORK — Premier David Barrett said here the B.C. government is "looking at" its oil royalty rates in response to complaints that they are so high no one will develop new wells in the province.

"I don't agree it is uneconomic, but I agree it is more severe than royalties in other areas," Barrett said in an interview.

"We are looking at it."

Barrett also slightly modified his previous flat statement that there was "no way" oil from Alaska would be used in a new B.C. refinery the government is promoting.

"We would not take Alaska oil shipped by tanker," he said. But, he claimed, his idea of a railway route for Alaska oil, known as "the way out," "is not to be discarded."

While oil tanker shipments through the Strait of Juan de Fuca are "totally unacceptable," he maintained that there is still U.S. interest in his railway plan.

Barrett also said that Canada should be moving in the direction of public ownership and control of all her natural gas and oil.

"I think the first step would be a marketing board such as we have in British Columbia," the premier said.

"That has given us control of the marketing process which is an entree for public ownership from there. But you don't have to go into the immediate public ownership as long as the public has some say and some control in regulating.

"That's the best first step to develop some confidence in Canada about the use of our own resources by Canadians."

In a speech honoring Bernard Ricklin, a militant trade unionist, Barrett said that taxing the rich to the hilt is the proper thing to do because they can afford it.

He offered encouragement to U.S. socialists, now in the doldrums over party factionalism by giving a brief rundown on the nuts-and-bolts operation of his NDP government.

"We tax the rich, and we tax them heavily," Barrett told 250 socialists.

Khmer Rouge Live Like Monks

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP)— Cambodia's victorious Khmer Rouge soldiers live in the manner of medieval monks. Poverty, chasity, obedience are the rules. Exercise is a daily regimen, and drinking, raising hell and chasing women are taboo.

Foreigners released from Phnom Penh last week say the average soldiers are simple, peasant youths bewildered by modern mechanical gadgetry, apparently untutored in political ideology and tightly controlled by their leaders.

There are separate women's combat units as well as boy soliders described as "very aggressive, dangerous and without fear."

Bernard Gaude, a Frenchman who lived in Cambodia for 26 years under four different regimes, spent two weeks with the Khmer Rouge in Phnom Penh after the city fell April 17 and provided this account of their lifestyles:

"They'd wake up at 4 sharp every morning, and do about two hours of calesthenics and other phyiscal exerice. This was followed by some close order drill with weapons. Then they'd go about their daily tasks, sweeping the streets and cleaning up the buildings.'

"At night, groups of them would gather together for what may have been self-criticism sessions. Several of them would sit in a circle and one would stand up and start talking, looking rather sheepish at times, scratching his chin and so on.

"They didn't drink any alcohol. Sometimes when they'd open up a bottle and discover it was wine or liquor they threw it away. But there was a formidable consumption of Pepsi-Colas and orangeades when they came in. They drank them warm and were as happy as kings.

"At night, patrols would move through the streets without a word. A column would pass by as silently as if it were in a rice paddy. All the men wore light sandals. I was very impressed. It is not surprising that they won."

Gaude and others said many Khmer Rouge harbored strong anti-American feelings arising from first-hand experiences of massive United States bombings and U.S.-supplied firepower.

The Frenchman said there are a number of different groups within the victorious army. There appeared to be nationalists of different varieties as well as several kinds of Communists — some with Chinese or North Vietnamese leanings, others with a Soviet bias.

"There was a certain feeling that all was not right among the various groups, that there was a powder keg that might explode into still further fighting," Gaude said.

Whatever division exists within the ranks, a well organized group had to be in command to engineer the total depopulation of Phnom Penh. Gaude said it was "terrifyingly magnificent . . . to see a city of three million emptied within three days."

Along with the young and healthy, the old, the sick, the pregnant and the dying were forced to march out of the city's hospitals. Wounded and sick were wheeled in their hospital beds through the streets.

"There was cruelty in this," Gaude said, "but I saw some real compassion and sadness in the faces of the Khmer Rouge soldiers watchng the exodus. I could see it as they watched pregnant women passing by, some of them moving very slowly, bent over, stopping every few feet to rest."

"But they could do nothing. They were controlled by an iron hand."

Many were reported left dying by the roadside.

Viet Cong Promise Nationwide Election

Times News Services

SAIGON — The Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government has called a three-day holiday May 15-17 to celebrate the Communist takeover and has promised to hold nationwide elections.

The PRG also called for the reunification of North and South Vietnam but said the first priority is restoring life in Saigon to normal.

The series of announcements meant that the outline of South Vietnam's new regime is emerging slowly and it appeared today that the Provisional Revolutionary Government, not the military nor the north Vietnamese, is in charge.

Until two days ago, all government announcemnts were signed either by a "citizens committee" or "the Saigon-Gia Dinh military management committee" under the name of Col. Gen. Tran Van Tra, whose title was left vague.

Two days ago, the PRG began making official announcements over the government's "Radio Liberation" from Saigon.

Armed security units made up of volunteers have been set up in every district and village of South Vietnam, the rado said. It rpeorted that 2,700 young people from the Youth and Students' Federation of South Vietnam have volunteered for security, peace-keeping and traffic duty in the capital.

Vietnamese are allowed to travel freely around the country to visit relatives and some have headed north to try to see their families in North Vietnam.

All foreigners, however, are currently restricted to the greater Saigon area so it is not possible to see how far pepole leaving Saigon are able to go. But some who returned to the city said they had been allowed to travel freely.

Three days ago the North Vietnam news agency reported that a new bridge had been buit across the Ben Hai River, which has marked the boundary between North and South Vietnam since 1954.

But it did not say whether people from Saigon were being allowed across it to visit their relatives in the north.

The free flow of goods along the roads from the Mekong Delta to Saigon has kept the markets of the capital bustling.

New Zealand has recognized the Provisional Revolutionary Government.

Prime Minister Wallace Rowling made the announcement at the first day of his ruling Labor party's annual conference here today.

"Vietnam has been through hell, but there is no point in recriminations now. It's time to establish a communication between the countries of the Pacific and of Southeast Asia," he said.

PRO-LIFE VIGILS DRAW 800

VANCOUVER (CP) — More than 800 members of the Pro-Life Society of B.C. chose Mother's Day to gather in silent vigils at six metropolitan hospitals to protest legalized abortion.

The largest gathering was at Vancouver General Hospital where 450 persons stood silently outside the Centennial Pavilion from 2 to 3 p.m.

"We prayed silently for the lives of those who never had a chance to be born," said Mrs. A. J. Green, board chairman of the Pro-Life society.

She said 120 persons took part in a vigil at Lions Gate Hospital in North Vancouver where Vancouver radiologist Dr. Michael Twohig spoke on the aims of the Pro-Life Movement.

The Pro-Life Society has been staging vigils at hospitals, beginning at VGH, for the last four years. This year they expanded the vigils to take in the Surrey and Burnaby hospitals.

Wash. State Studies Plan

completed its terminal at Cherry Point. Texaco has not yet applied for permission to expand its dock.

However, many state congressmen are known to favor a new loading terminal at Port Angeles so supertankers would not have to enter the Gulf Islands area. Burrows Bay is at the beginning of the Gulf Islands zone on the U.S. side.

If approved, the Trans Mountain terminal would be constructed by Trans Mountain Oil Pipe Line Corp. of Delaware, the U.S. subsidiary of the Vancouver firm.

It would cost about $2.4 million a year to operate the Burrows Bay terminal.

If the plan is not approved, the Trans Mountain pipeline in Washington State would have to be abandoned eventually as Canadian exports are phased out.

In a separate proposal, the Vancouver company has suggested it would be interested in constructing a $400 million pipeline from New Brunswick to Buffalo to carry overseas crude oil to various U.S. refineries.

The proposal is still in a preliminary stage.

In Victoria, provincial Liberal leader David Anderson, a long-time opponent of tanker traffic in this area, said the Trans Mountain proposal for Burrows Bay is a positive idea because it would reduce the number of tankers going through the strait.

In dealing with supertankers, it is the number that is important, not the size, he said. It was not a case of small ships or large ships, it is a matter of enormous tankers or very enormous tankers. A collision involving a supertanker of any size would be a great disaster, he said.

vincial and federal level as spokesman on land claims for the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs, and by his own admission he works by diplomacy.

Paul, Bill Wilson of Vancouver and George Watts of Port Alberni were appointed at the Chilliwack meeting to lead a new movement to fight for Indian land claims.

It was Watts who declared at a demonstration at the Legislative Building two weeks ago that any Indians who continued to take government money are the enemy.

That line is now being downplayed, said Paul, because it's divisive.

What the chiefs rejected at Chilliwack was funding for all projects and band administrative costs, he said.

Rejection of welfare or unemployment insurance benefits, or of funding for schools is another matter, he said, and must be left to individual choice.

Some people are joining the movement and rejecting welfare but many will not, he said.

Strongest supporters of the new movement are the young and the old, he said.

"People under 25 and people over 60 are very clear on where we're going."

Between them is the "confused" middle-aged group that have been most affected by the white culture.

Paul admits he's one of this group, who thought that by education and hard work they could become white men.

"We found it's been an empty trip since the best we're able to do is be a token Indian in white society."

The only route for Indians to escape the poverty, the lack of opportunity for self-fulfilment, the erosion of native culture is the land claims, Paul said.

For him there's nothing else that matters, no other way out. A lands claims settlement means independence at last, freedom fro mthe control of the Indian affairs department.

No half-way measures will satisfy him.

If Ottawa offers to disband the Indian affairs bureaucracy in B.C. and let Indians administer all the funds for the province, that simply creates an Indian bureaucracy, Paul said. Ottawa is still pulling the strings, and that's unacceptable.

Laos Fall At Hand

solved. He said rumors were being spread by "opportunists seeking to further their national interests, undermine the national economy and destroy peace."

"In reality, the situation of our country is not serious," Souvanna said. "The government has not changed its role and policies but will firmly continue to apply the Vienti ane peace agreement and its protocols."

Although nothing official has been said about replacements for the departed members of the coalition cabinet, political and diplomatic sources here expect they will be succeeded by figures who will offer little resistance to a Pathet Lao takeover.

The prime minister assured foreigners of "security and justice" and asked them to keep their shops open and not raise prices of commodities and aggravate already rampant inflation.

the weather

Unstable air continued to give occasional cloud and the odd shower to parts of the north and central interior while a second weak disturbance gave some clouds and the occasional shower to the northern Vancouver Island regions last night. A general improvement will take place over most areas as a small high pressure area continues to build over the south coast today. A small disturbance is expected to move towards the north coast region on Tuesday giving the chance of showers late Tuesday afternoon or evening.

Israel-ECM Pact Miffs Arabs

BRUSSELS (UPI) — The European Common Market has signed a far-reaching trade agreement with Israel despite Arab warnings of the political consequences.

Israeli Foreign Minister Yigal Allon praised the "courage" of the common market, but the Algerian government urged Arabs to call off talks for a similar pact.

The nine-nation economic community signed the agreement with Israel Sunday, defending the accord as part of a "balanced over-all approach to the Mediterranean."

The pact, which replaces a 1970 trade agreement, calls for duty-free imports of all Israeli industrial products and most farm goods into the market by July 1, 1977. Israel would end duties on similar market products by Jan. 1, 1980.

A common market spokesman said Sunday a trade pact with three North African nations could still be concluded by the end of the year despite Arab opposition to the Israeli agreement.

The 20-nation Arab league warned the common market last week of the "political consequences" of signing a pact with Israel before reaching an agreement with the North African states — Algeria, Morocco and Tunisia.

The Algerian government, in an urgent memorandum, asked the Arab league states to call off plans for talks set to begin June 10 with common market economic experts. The Arabs planned to hold a preparatory meeting in Cairo May 20.

In 1972, the common market began efforts to improve trade relations with middle eastern nations, promising to maintain a balance between concessions granted Israel and the Arabs.

The two-year talks with Israel succeeded — in the face of the oil crisis and the 1973 Middle East war — but negotiations with the North African states were bogged down by such complicated issues as fuel exports to Europe.

V.I. Federal Gov't Nurses Join Pay Scale Strike

Ten nurses employed by the federal government on Vancouver Island struck today to protest the failure of the treasury board and Public Service of Canada Professional Institute to reach an agreement for higher salaries.

They join about 65 nurses already striking in the Yukon territory at hospital and nursing stations maintained by the federal government, and at other nursing stations scattered through other provinces. In other parts of B.C. 50 federal nurses remain on the job.

The department of national health and welfare employs the Vancouver Island nurses at a general purpose clinic in the Dockyard and federal building and at clinics at Duncan, Tofino, Port Hardy and Alert Bay.

Their contract with the federal government expired last December and negotiations have been conducted with the assistance of a conciliation board which has recommended a two-year agreement which nurses are voting on. But they have been in a legal position to strike since May 3 and strike action so far is taken as an indication of dissatisfaction with the proposed terms.

B.C. and Yukon representative Joseph Clare, of Vancouver, said nurses seek parity with salaries paid to nurses in the provincial government service. As an example he said general duty nurses in hospital work in Ontario are paid $12,300 compared with $10,000 for federal nurses doing the same work.

The provincial service also gets a cost of living allowance computed quarterly.

Treasury board offered parity this year, then 8-9 per cent next year in a two-year contract without COL allowance.

Federal nurses also sought monetary recognition of the salary discrepancy which existed in 1974, and was willing to accept a lump sum payment.

RARE LOSS by Russian grandmaster Paul Keres occurred in Hamilton, Ont., on weekend when he played 28 boards simultaneously. But 17-year-old Tom Schmidt, a Grade 11 student, admitted he was only able to win because Keres was playing so many opponents at one time. Keres, 59, is competing in Vancouver next weekend.

Surgeon Boycott Spreads, Threatens All California

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A boycott of all but emergency surgery by many California doctors protesting high malpractice insurance rates continued into an 11th day today, threatening to engulf all of California.

"It's a foregone conclusion that this will ultimately extend to the entire state of California," Dr. Sanford Marcus, president of the Union of American Physicians, said Sunday.

Doctors in two more counties in northern California prepared to join the protest. Anesthesiologists in Santa Clara and San Mateo counties said they will assist in performing only emergency surgery starting today.

Members of the Los Angeles County Medical Association were reported to have considered a boycott that would affect hospitals in a 200-mile stretch from the Mexican border to the Techachapi Mountains.

In Sacramento, a spokesman for 60 anesthesiologists said they will go out May 19 unless the state legislature takes action before then.

No elective surgery has been performed in about 50 private hospitals in San Francisco, Almeda, Contra Costa and Marin counties since May 1 when anesthesiologists and some other physicans refused to renew Argonaut Insurance Co. malpractice coverage. Non-private hospitals reported a booming business in patients unable to get into their own hospitals.

The curtailed surgery has drastically reduced patient occupancy and private hospitals in San Francisco alone are losing about $200,000 a day. Some hospitals have laid off up to 50 per cent of their staff, including nurses, and in other hospitals employees are working shorter weeks.

Anesthesiologists and other specialists involved in the boycott who had paid $5,377 a year formal practice coverage with Argonaut now must pay $18,164. Those in San Mateo and Santa Clara are covered by Travellers Corp. which announced rate increases of up to 500 per cent last week.

Bomb Found In Lethbridge

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — A bomb consisting of a pint jar, which police believed contained gunpowder, wired to batteries and a white clock was discovered Saturday 200 yards from the University of Lethbridge.

It was detonated by police and caused no damage although it went off with "quite some force," said Chief Ralph Michelson.

He said the bomb was discovered by some children in a coulee.

MD Boycott Spreads

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A boycott by California doctors, protesting malpractice insurance rates, spread to three more counties today and a physicians' spokesman said he expects the boycott to extend into the entire state.

If your house burned down today, would your insurance cover its replacement?

This guide can help you find the answer.

Because of inflation in home construction costs in the last few years many homeowners find they have insurance policies that do not adequately cover the investment they have in their homes.

This has troubled insurance people and, as a result, many have developed systems to help their insureds arrive at a proper level of "insurance to value". One such system is the Home Evaluation Guide issued by Insurance Bureau of Canada and adopted by a wide cross section of the insurance industry. We are pleased to make it available to you. It could be the first step in helping you upgrade your home insurance to meet current realities.

By following four easy steps in the Guide (it will only take minutes) and mailing it to your agent, broker or insurance company, you can arrive at an estimation of what it would cost to rebuild your home today. From there, you and your agent can decide on any changes to be made in your policy.

In addition to the Guide, the Insurance Bureau is also making available two other booklets: "Sixty ways to prevent fire in your home", and "Has your home outgrown your home insurance coverage?"

All three of these booklets are easy to understand, and easy to use. And by using them properly, you can greatly ease your mind and protect what is probably your most important investment.

Please send me the booklets indicated above. I understand that there is no obligation and that no salesman will call.

Sinatra Offers $1M For Punch

TORONTO (CP) — Singer Frank Sinatra says he will pay $1 million if photographer Lex Panhuyzen of The Star can prove he was punched by one of the entertainer's bodyguards at the Royal York Hotel early Saturday.

But Panhuyzen, 30, who repeated his claim that he was punched in the chest, said Sunday he is not interested in the money.

Sinatra said he is satisfied no punch was thrown by guard Mike Howard, 25, an ex-marine. He backed his confidence with the $1-million offer.

The singer, who performed two shows in the city Saturday which earned him more than $400,000, interrupted his first show Saturday to deny any punch had taken place.

In the second show, he again challenged the allegation, saying: "I said I'd pay $1 million to that reporter who said one of my men punched the photographer in the mouth. So far, he hasn't stepped forward to collect it."

Peter Goddard, a Star reporter covering Sinatra's arrival at the hotel, said he saw Howard rush up to Panhuyzen and throw out his arm at the photographer, but added the crowd prevented him from seeing whether a blow landed.

Panhuyzen said he rushed up a few flights of stairs to get a photograph of the singer as he was being welcomed at the hotel.

STE. SCHOLASTIQUE TO OPEN OCTOBER

OTTAWA (CP) — The new $300-million Montreal International Airport at Ste. Scholastique, Que., described by the transport department as the world's largest, will be opened officially Oct. 4.

Transport Minister Jean Marchand also announced that scheduled international commercial flights will begin from the airport Oct. 26. The airport, called Mirabel, is 34 miles northwest of Montreal.

When operations begin in October, a total of 19 domestic and foreign airlines will be using the airport. That number is likely to increase by the time the Summer Olympics begin in Montreal next year, the transport department said in a news release.

Air transport industry officials and reporters will be shown around the airport on the two days before the official opening and there will be a "public open house" the day after the opening.

International and charter flight traffic will be switched from the current Montreal international airport at Dorval to Mirabel for the winter season beginning Oct. 26.

Northerners in Cold On Olympic Tickets

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Any hopes that northern Canada had of direct access to tickets to the 1976 Olympics at Montreal have been dashed, a Northwest Territories spokesman said today.

"The north is back out in the cold," said Leo Kyllot, chief of recreation for the territories.

Kyllo said his department was assured last week by an executive member of the Olympic committee in Montreal that some tickets would be made available to the Northwest Territories, but he learned Sunday that Simon St. Pierre, an Olympic committee spokesman, had told a member of Kyllo's department that tickets could not be available.

"There's been too many other centres not getting them who have come to them with complaints, too," Kyllo said.

Eatons, with its 80 stores across Canada, is handling distribution of Olympic tickets, but there are no retail Eaton's outlets in the Yukon and Northwest Territories.

Cutting Back the Deficit

News that B.C. Ferries will run up a huge deficit this year, probably around $25 million, need not be accepted so fatalistically by Transport and Communications minister Robert Strachan. True, the government ferry fleet has not paid its own way in recent years. It's an expensive and labor-intensive task, hauling motor vehicles back and forth across Georgia Strait. But at the rate the deficits keep climbing, some drastic remedial steps will have to be taken lest the ferry fleet become too severe a drain on the provincial treasury.

There's some doubt as to whether even $25 million represents a true picture of actual deficits. The government has estimated the ferries will generate $51 million in revenue in the current fiscal year, which ends March 31 next year, but estimated expenditures for B.C. Ferries in the same period total $102.6 million.

The government has been paying some of the fleet's capital costs directly out of surplus revenues. The three new ferries being built locally and in Vancouver are to be paid for in this manner. The government considers the $50 million well-spent, as it creates jobs in B.C. shipyards. So it's difficult to add up the losses with any precision.

But there are some things the government could do to attempt to slow down the flow of red ink. Fares on the ferries haven't been changed in years. Compared with the cost of an equivalent journey on equivalent systems — across the English Channel, for example — B.C. Ferries is giving away rides.

Given that the cost of just about everything has increased with inflation, most British Columbians would probably accept a modest fare increase with equanimity. Better yet, Strachan should revive his discarded plans for peak period fares.

Railroads and airlines charge extra in summer months. Canada's two passenger-carrying railways have so-called red, white and blue days with fares geared to demand. Why not gear B.C. Ferries tolls to a similar system? Charge lower fares in mid-week and in the off-season to encourage optimum use.

Ferry management might also take a harsh look at some of the frills they provide aboard ship. None of their trips, except the Prince Rupert run, is longer than two hours, so why the need for restaurants and big cafeterias? The dining room service has been pared back considerably, so it now probably serves no more than a small minority of passengers. The cafeterias are a pleasant enough service, but the ferries are in the business of moving people, not feeding them. Phasing out the food business would also cut back on the ferries' wage bill, which doubled this year.

Strachan should also keep hammering at Ottawa on the subject of subsidies. B.C. deserves equal treatment with the maritime provinces and Ontario and Quebec. The ferries are an integral part of Canada's highway system, and it is patently unfair that B.C. is discriminated against in this respect. Perhaps a threat to charge out-of-province vehicles the real cost — say $30 or $40 a trip — might have the desired effect in Ottawa.

"... madam wishes to see something in a hard hat ... as the construction men wear ... it is for downtown shopping ..."

Emergency Act for Emergencies

The price of liberty may be eternal vigilance, but those individuals raising a hue and cry about the provincial government's Emergency Program Act, which was introduced in the legislature on Thursday, are making a mountain out of an exceedingly small molehill.

These alarmist vigilantes see dangerous powers lurking in a bill whose only purpose is to allow proper preparation for the inevitable natural disasters which hit British Columbia from time to time, and to allow the cabinet leeway to act quickly and decisively when an earthquake or flood does occur.

The bill is a long-overdue revamping of existing legislation. It replaces the Civil Defence Act, which until 1973, when the New Democratic Party administration expunged the passage, spoke of "the existing and increasing possibility of the occurrence of disasters, or emergencies from enemy attack, sabotage, or other hostile action ..." Shades of Pearl Harbor and the Battle of Estevan Point!

Critics make much of the fact that the new bill contains no definition of the term emergency, (an amendment has been promised) but the Civil Defence Act didn't either, and that hoary piece of legislation was never abused, in fact, was rarely used at all. Look at the record.

In the last major emergency, when there was a real threat of dykes breaking and flooding much of Kamloops, the cabinet did not use the Civil Defence Act but introduced special legislation directed specifically towards the particular emergency at hand. The legislation was debated in the house, and all parties supported it.

Agreed, the new bill contains some rather sweeping powers—the provincial secretary may freeze prices in B.C. of anything necessary to "safeguard the public," individuals may be prohibited from travelling, persons between the ages of 18 and 60 may be conscripted as laborers with or without pay.

But typhoons, tidal waves, earthquakes, forest fires, avalanches and floods aren't easily-handled, everyday occurrences. Their effects on populated areas are often catastrophic. Local authorities are often incapable of responding adequately, local capability often is very limited.

Therefore such emergency powers are necessary in emergency situations, and the record suggests they will be used only sparingly.

Cliche: New Quebec Folk Hero

By RICHARD CLEROUX

MONTREAL — The Quebec inquiry into construction union freedoms may well be the only right thing Judge Robert Cliche has done all his life.

He was always out of step with everybody else, always doing the wrong thing, always saying the wrong thing at the wrong time. His individuality wasn't accepted, his politics were unpopular and, lately, as a provincial court judge, his hair was too long and his countenance much too uncool for a judge.

But, finally, everything has turned around. Overnight, Judge Cliche, 54, the Lion of the Beauce, has become a Quebec folk hero. His name is a household synonym for honesty (at a time, polls show, when half the population doubts the integrity of elected representatives).

It wasn't always so. There was a time when being a radical wasn't popular. They said he was just being difficult.

At 16 he was thrown out of the prestige-laden Seminaire de Quebec boarding school for "lack of discipline."

Whenever he encounters another bilingual person like himself, he'll often jump back and forth at top speed in midsentence between the two languages, his long grey hair (long before it became the style) flying and his arms waving through the air.

He left the navy in 1946 as a lieutenant and went back to his law studies and became a supporter of the Liberals, speaking at their assemblies after opening his practice in St. Joseph de Beauce, where his roots were, instead of Montreal or Quebec, where the big money was for bright young lawyers.

"There wasn't that much to do so I read and thought a lot," he recalls. When he wasn't arguing why farmer Roy's land went 10 feet farther than farmer Latulippe's fence said it did, he was out collecting Beauce antiques or some of the local pottery the area is famous for, and building up one of the finest private collections of old Quebec books.

He isn't the usual kind of judge one meets in the newspaper business. One day last fall during one of the darkest days of the inquiry hearings when all that seemed to come out was dirt, rot and corruption — a respected union leader had committed perjury, a judge had broken down in the witness box after denying he had used his influence to obtain a favor for a betting syndicate — Judge Cliche chose to read a quotation from one of his favorite authors, Roger Martin du Gard.

"To live and work in the name of what? In the name of the past and the future, in the name of your father and your sons' in the name of the chain. To ensure the continuation, to pass on what you received, improved, enriched. That is perhaps our reason to live."

At age 42, an age when few men, especially country lawyers, move from right to left, Robert Cliche left the Liberals, the party his dad had run for in 1935, and joined the NDP in 1963. He tried to implant his new political credo in the Beauce — the Quebec cradle of Social Credit — and was about as successful as if he had tried to found a local chapter of the Orange Lodge. It was the wrong place.

They even tried to pass him off as "a thinking man's Real Caouette." Caouette replied that "communists" worked for Cliche.

In 1965, he told a gathering of University of Montreal students: "The more I look at you and your demands, the more you look to me like your bourgeois fathers." A little later he told another rally "I loathe doctrinaire socialists who pretend they hold exclusive political truths."

Needless to say he never won any elections.

In Duvernay riding in 1968 federal election, out of more than 37,000 votes cast, he came within 2,375 votes of beating Liberal Eric Kierans (the best showing ever by the Quebec NDP) but many people said that was only because voters couldn't decide which was the least socialist.

He learned his humanity and compassion fighting cases for impoverished farmers down in the Beauce. "My father taught me my love of the people," he said flatly once. A lot of that compassion came out during the public hearings. The testimony of one honest construction worker so moved him that he stepped down from the bench and went to shake the man's hand one occasion.

At another time he was almost in tears after listening to an unemployed worker tell how he had paid $1,500 on a $250 debt and still owed $750.

"You have paid your debt," he told the man, and forced the loan shark to sign a paper saying the debt had been cleared.

At times during the inquiry he would fly into a rage, shout and scream and insult witnesses he thought were lying. His eyes would open wide, his finger would suddenly shoot out and he would almost leap out of his seat in fury.

Sometimes Cliche went too far. He was the first to admit it. He once told QFL lawyer Michel Decary: "I won't let you see the evidence beforehand because I don't want my witnesses ending up in the back river." Judge Cliche apologized the next day.

There weren't very many other people the provincial government could have picked to head an inquiry into construction unions. Few men had such highly respected credentials among rank-and-file labor militants. Premier Robert Bourassa tricked him into it really by challenging Cliche a year ago: "You've been criticizing all your life. Now's you chance to do something about it."

He believes that he's done his part. Now it's up to the people. He had never believed that there could be so much corruption in the construction industry, the government, and in his beloved unions. "Nothing will really change unless we — that's you and me — want it to change," he said recently.

"The best protection in society is the honesty of its citizens, 99.9 per cent of whom are honest. We are the government."

Dynamite Document Indicts All

By ROB BULL

QUEBEC — A dynamite document of 600 pages wrapped in yellow cardboard was released by the province of Quebec to reporters last week and the blast will be shaking everybody involved in the province's construction industry — unions, management, the civil service and politics — for some time.

Premier Robert Bourassa's government, the report says, accepted and tried to work with gangsters.

The Liberals used known gangsters in the construction movement as election campaign workers, and got them out of trouble with the police. At one point, Bourassa's lefthand man Paul Desrochers met Dede Desjardins, king of the construction unions in the Quebec City club for lunch.

Over the mid-day meal, the two discussed an illegal proposal to limit the right of workers to join unions other than those controlled by Desjardins.

Not only did Labor Minister Jean Cournoyer admit he was unable to enforce the law, he also drafted another which gave Desjardins what he had always wanted, primacy for his unions in the construction field.

Politicians interfered over the heads of civil servants doing their jobs, participated in patronage, and closed their eyes to criminal acts by certain labor officials to the point where many citizens no longer looked to the government to help.

The document is the report of the commission of inquiry on the exercise of union freedom in the construction industry headed by Judge Robert Cliche, Montreal lawyer Brian Mulroney and union official Guy Chevrette.

They came up with 134 recommendations aimed at cleaning up unions, controlling contractors and builders, revising legislation affecting the industry and giving Quebec construction workers a certain amount of security.

They also analyzed the industry in depth and widely distributed blame for the current state of sector-wide anarchy.

In the covering letter they wrote presenting their report to Premier Robert Bourassa the commissioners said, "we lost no time, only illusions. Indeed, at the beginning we thought we would meet fully human men, as noble in their greatness as their frailties. We were naive.

"Certainly we met many honest citizens who are slaving hard and who hope for better things. For us these men were both a guide and inspiration.

"But on the daily menu of our sessions we were too often placed in the presence of frauds, swindlers and riff-raff."

The report names some of these people like Andre (Dede) Desjardins, the uncrowned king of the construction unions who surrounded himself with thugs, broke the law and tried to bring the entire industry under his control.

But the report also criticizes one of the most important policemen in the province, Chief Inspector Herve Patenaude, assistant director general of the Quebec Provincial Police for a serious error of judgment.

"The commission considers that the responsibility for special services, which was confided in Patenaude, is one which requires a more faithful memory than he has shown. It also requires a nuance and subtlety of wit, strong judgment, tact and clear-sightedness. We doubt Patenaude satisfies all these requirements."

The government is criticized at many points for passing laws it had no intention of enforcing and for itself trying to get around principles it had established in legislation. The report also notes that the government itself submitted to blackmail, thereby setting no example to those citizens it expects to obey the law.

Businessmen were noted, including many from outside of Quebec, who were so eager to make a profit that they willingly suborned union officials and civil servants.

The laws controlling the industry are almost swamp-like in their complexity. Structures established to govern construction activities have become nests of nepotism and patronage. Official restraints on illegal acts are slow to move and often contradictory.

The report recommends a provincial construction board which would list all workers and companies authorized to work in the industry here, be able to investigate throughout the industry, coordinate all hiring for unionized jobs in the industry, inspect construction company annual reports, inspect safety and health precautions on work sites, maintain arbitration services and supervise elections to decide union and management representatives who would negotiate collective agreements.

The six organizations representing employers in the Quebec construction industry would be unified into a single group for labor relations. Only licensed contractors would be allowed to operate in the province.

All regulations and statutes of international or United States unions would be subordinate to Quebec and Canadian laws and must be ratified by the provincial government. Union members would be informed annually of the state and use of union funds. Union members have the right to dissent from union leaders' rulings with no sanctions. Four union locals would be put under government trusteeship.

All strike decisions and the acceptance or rejection of a collective agreement by a union would be decided on the basis of a secret ballot.

Nobody could become a union shop steward, business agent or officer who within the past five years had been found guilty of such crimes as theft, blackmail, extortion, fraud, theft, arson, narcotics trafficking, murder, assault or conspiracy to commit these crimes.

Quebec construction workers have a choice of belonging to one of three union groupings. The Centrale des Syndicats Democratiques, the smallest, the Confederation of National Trades Unions, Canadian-only, and the Quebec Federation of Labor which represents Canadian and United States controlled unions.

The commission placed much of the blame for the violence and brutality in the Quebec construction industry on a campaign by the QFL to drive the other two organizations out. It also criticizes the government for allowing this to happen.

It recommends that all workers be allowed to choose the organization to which they wish to belong in an annual secret vote, that no recruiting be done on construction sites and that serious sanctions be enacted against union or management representatives who try to contravene this choice.

The construction board would also keep on hand a permanent manpower inventory, determine wage-earners' status annually, supervise the system and attempt to establish future supply and demand.

Once this preferential system had established a certain stability in the workforce and once labor and management had negotiated how to carry the costs of such a program, a job security system could be started.

The commission recognizes that it could be better called an income security program.

In each skill, some construction workers are on the job year-round, the number varying drastically from one skill to another. Each skill also has particular seasons of high and low activity. At peak periods occasional workers shoulder part of the load.

For an income security program to work, management and labor would have to agree how many men within each skill who have worked more than 500 hours during the previous year are entitled to take part in the program.

The system could guarantee 50 weeks' salary to a pre-determined group in each skill, with another eight to nine months' work for another group of workers.

With a guaranteed income program, another requirement would be a central pay system.

Contractors would pay the salaries to the board a week in advance and they would be distributed by officials. The pre-payment would be a form of guarantee. All contractors would have to register with the board.

The commissioners feel their proposals in this area would remove some of the pressures from labor and management and thus help to make the construction industry a little more civilized.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of May 12, 1915

WASHINGTON — The United States government in a note to Germany today; formally demanded of the imperial government a strict accounting for the loss of American lives in the sinking of the Lusitania and the violation of American rights in the war zone. It also asked guarantees that there will be no repetition of such events or practices. The communication lays stress on the inhumanity of attacks without warning on merchant vessels.

Pearson Reassessed: Policies Built on Sand

By J. L. GRANATSTEIN
The Globe and Mail

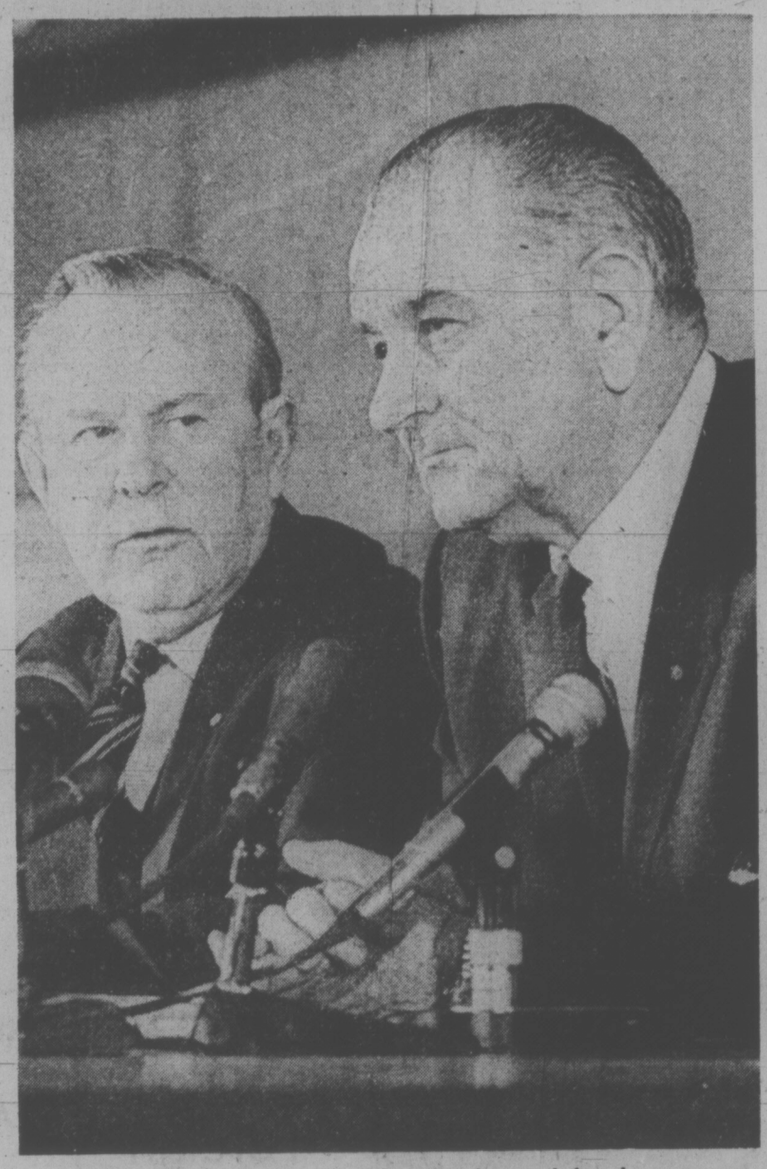
After he retired as prime minister in 1968, Lester Pearson returned to the teaching career he had abandoned 40 years earlier when he joined the Department of External Affairs. His seminar at Carleton University, Peyton Lyon and Bruce Thordarson tell us in an essay in Freedom And Change, Essays In Honor Of Lester B. Pearson (McClelland and Stewart, $12.95, Michael Fry, editor) was popular, very informal, and almost unstructured. Students were permitted to be unprepared or habitually late, and one participant was finally moved to observe: "Now I believe those stories about the chaos in the Pearson cabinet."

Pearson himself would have laughed at this story. Less than many of those who talk and write about him now, 30 months after his death, Pearson would not have sought deification. Myths are essential to any nation, and Pearson believed in symbols, such as the Maple Leaf flag. But I would be surprised if he had ever envisaged himself as part of the Canadian myth, the embodiment of the Canada of peacekeeping successes, of honored commitments.

The Crusade Starts to Fade

Yet such is the pace of historical interpretation these days that the myths are scarcely formed before they are under assault. Revisionist historians, already close to dominance in their interpretation of the post-1945 period in the United States, are just now beginning their work in Canada. The idealism of Canada's crusade against Communism and for the North Atlantic Treaty is starting to fade; the easy assuredness that our cause was just and the other side's evil is gone; the belief that Canada and the United States were partners who understood and trusted each other, that too is in ruins. Not even the United Nations survives intact, and peacekeeping now seems something of a snare and a delusion.

All these policies were associated with Pearson, an indication of the dominance he achieved in delineating our policy in its period of greatest importance and influence. Under his guiding hand, Canada after 1945 entered a decade of power and prestige, a legacy of the national effort during the Second World War and the product of the country's enormous wartime industrial and financial power. Of course, our power was only relative and it could not last, but few realized this at the time. Certainly Pearson, backed by Prime Minister St. Laurent, did not hesitate to use our strength. The Canadian role in the formation of NATO was major, and Pearson readily convinced himself of the danger the Communists posed to the West. "The chief menace now," he argued in a speech in 1948, "is subversive aggressive Communism, the servant of power politics



Pearson and Johnson . . . he learned his lesson

In such circumstances, the power of the United States was the base on which freedom rested, and Pearson idealized the good intentions of the Americans. As late as 1958, for example, he argued that "western democratic government have no aggressive or imperialistic designs. This is as true of the most powerful, the United States of America, as it is of, say Uruguay or Iceland. Indeed," he added with a blinding naivete, "Americans, though no Russian may ever believe it, are perhaps the least imperialistically minded people that ever achieved great power in the world . . . They are home-bodies, and their 'westerns' give them an adequate if vicarious sense of adventure."

Canada's role, as devised by Pearson, was to help the Americans, to encourage, to warn and to advise, but above all to assist the United Ststes to achieve its goals which were by definition the same after Vietnam and Nixon, but in the 1940s and 1950s people believed it. And it was in response to this belief that Canada sent troops to Korea in 1950 and to Europe under NATO. The Korean War was costly but it ended with relative speed; the commitment in Europe, although severely attenuated in numbers, still drags on with no sign of its ending. To a substantial extent as well, this same following-the-leader attitude took Canada into peacekeeping.

The Refrain Was Seductive

The Suez crisis of 1956 was Pearson's triumph on the United Nations' stage. His suggestions for a peacekeeping force, supported by the United States, provided the way for Britain and France to be rescued from their folly and at the same time stopping the fighting and the threat of an expanded war. It was a triumph, and if it involved Canada in a long and frustrating peacekeeping venture in Egypt, a role that ultimately ended in something close to a national humiliation in 1967, few anticipated this in 1956. The success of that year led inexorably to additional peacekeeping roles in the Congo, in Cyprus and in India, and to the elevation of this technique for freezing conflicts into a canon of Canadian policy.

We came to believe we were eminently suited to this role and that UN service even offered us a way to independence in foreign policy. This was close to nonsense (I believed it in the mid-1960s) but it seemed a seductive refrain for a time. People forgot that peacekeeping was far different from peacemaking; they forgot that the idea succeeded only where the great powers acquiesced or provided logistical support; and they closed their eyes to the fact that Canada often acted in its peacekeeping efforts as a surrogate for the United States. The revelations about Canada's role on the Vietnam supervisory commission in the 1960s should make this last point evident.

The close relations with Washington that Pearson had developed led to our role in Vietnam. To his credit, Pearson gradually came to see that U.S. policy there was destructive, and in 1965 he went to Temple University in Philadelphia to speak. His address is printed in Canadian-American Summit Diplomacy 1923-1973 (McClelland and Stewart, $4.95, Roger Swanson, editor). In it, Pearson ventured the tentative suggestion "that a suspension of air strikes against North Vietnam at the right time (Pearson's emphasis) might provide the Hanoi authorities with an opportunity, if they wish to take it, to inject some flexibility into their policy . . ." This was no denunciation of President Lyndon Johnson's bombing of the North or of U.S. policy; in the same speech, Pearson said American "motives were honorable; neither mean nor imperialistic." But Johnson blew his top and Pearson was summoned the next day for a Texas-style chewing out at Camp David.

Apparently Pearson learned his lesson — or almost. In August 1966, LBJ came to Campobello to lay a cornerstone at Franklin Roosevelt's summer place. Pearson's brief welcoming remarks included a reference to Vietnam: ". . . I hope that the guns of Vietnam and all the guns everywhere — may soon cease to fire; that discussion, negotiation and agreement . . . may soon replace the fighting and the killing." The U.S. bombing was still underway, and Swanson tells us that Pearson left out of his remarks, but not from the printed text of his speech, a hope that "the bombs may cease to fall." One roasting from LBJ was ample.

Perhaps fearing even stronger U.S. pressures, Pearson at no time tried to tackle the problem of American investment. At the end, Pearson came grudgingly to admit that this might have been an error. In his memoirs, he attributed his inactivity to a pride in Canada and a faith in its future held by Canadians of his generation. "We were more self-confident, less fretful," he said. Lyon and Thordarson offer much the same interpretation, observing that Pearson was "uneasily aware that he and his colleagues had not sufficiently taken into account all aspects of 'creeping continentalism'." But, they add, at no time did Pearson believe Canada's independence had been compromised: "In most discussions, he denied that United States investment restricted Canada's freedom of action, and claimed that only Canadians ever thought of their country as a United States satellite."

In Defence Of Hindsight

That sounds like wishful thinking, as much out of tune with reality as Pearson's speeches on American benevolence. But Lyon and Thordarson tell us that what exasperated Pearson most was the way revisionist historians used hindsight to castigate the decision-makers of his day. "This he seemed to regard as unfair, perhaps even unscholarly." There is some ground for this complaint, but we must try to understand the motives of Pearson and his colleagues if we are to prevent similar errors now. To seek understanding is not to impute disloyalty; none would accuse Pearson of that. But it may not be too much to say that the foundations on which he based his policy were made of sand. Perhaps he should have realized this; if he had then this country might not be in its present plight.

Black Bitterness Underestimated

By JUDITH LISTOWEL
Times of London

Everyone in South Africa is convinced that Prime Minister John Vorster is genuine in his desire to achieve detente. They know that his aim is to ensure the future of the four million Europeans in South Africa. But the best informed whites also believe that he is making a grave mistake in not according meaningful concessions to the blacks now. In their view Mr. Vorster overestimates the power of his right wing critics, and he underestimates the bitterness of the blacks, especially that of the young, educated Africans.

John Vorster has not made a single mistake in his efforts to engage the leaders of the black African countries to the north in a dialogue, with the intention of providing aid and know-how for their economies. With the exception of Nigeria and possibly Zaire, all the independent African countries are in economic and financial straits, and need South Africa's help. But most of them say — as President Nyerere says — "Why doesn't Vorster begin by giving the Africans in his own country a more decent deal? Why does he not treat them as human beings?"

NYERERE
. . . 'human beings'

The main reason for his delay in making these concessions is his fear of creating a breach in his own ranks.

But in the present political alignment of the African continent, Vorster either succeeds in dismantling apartheid, or the day will come when the 20 million blacks will come to power and wreak vengeance.

To achieve this change in atmosphere, he would have to tip a wink to the Afrikaaner press, and the editors of Die Burger, the Transvaaler, Report, Die Beeld, perhaps even Die Faderland would come out with articles that would at long last teach the facts of life to those whites who still keep their heads in the sand.

Most important of all, Vorster could use the Broederbond, to which he has belonged since his youth and which supported Hitler during the Second World War. Its members — like Vorster himself — have learned many lessons since then, and are aware that unless they come to some agreement with the blacks their future is in grave danger.

VORSTER
. . . grave mistake?

As for the black Africans, their bitterness and cynicism cannot be sufficiently stressed. They do not believe that any good can come to them from Europeans; they have been driven to the conviction that only by force can they improve their lot.

Talking to Africans, it is easy to find out what they want. They are not interested in the vote; but they want to keep their families together — to be rid of the iniquitious law according to which any African in a town who has been unemployed for two months must be sentenced and deported to his or her homeland or a tribal area.

The second wish is that their children should obtain a proper education — not an education in the vernacular by inadequate teachers, with hardly any possibility for higher education. Third, they long for their children to become eligible for jobs according to their qualifications and on merit.

It would not be fair to say that no improvements have been made; Africans are being admitted to some positions hitherto barred to them. In the near future two films will be shot in South Africa (one by Carlo Ponti) in which Africans will play star roles.

THE PRICE OF GRACIOUS LIVING

By MERVYN HARRIS
Johannesburg Star

Four cars stood glistening in the sun of the driveway of a plush suburban home. A beautiful garden and lawns spread far out in front and behind. Stooping among carefully tended beds and neatly-trimmed bushes, a gardener paused to wipe sweat from his brow.

"The master and madam are very proud of their garden," he said.

But for those who tend the gardens in the affluent northern suburbs of Johannesburg it is no bed of roses. The gracious living is obtained at the expense of human misery.

"The rich people pay very little money. Poor people pay more," say most of the gardeners. They refer to the affluent householders as "nice people who rob us."

Sometimes the anger boils over: "We work like slaves, and get paid like slaves."

The average pay of the gardeners who form part of the retinue of servants "living-in" is about $45 a month .It comes out at even less for those who work on a part-time or daily basis.

Two gardeners who work four days a week in a Houghton home (whose owners possess four cars), earn $3 a day, plus a meal and their bus fares. They have to walk several kilometres to the nearest bus stop.

"Some are really exploited," says Mrs. Sheila Duncan, director of the Black Sash advice office. "A few are unskilled. But many become highly skilled and proud professional people."

One of the proud gardeners who has been working for the same employer for 40 years had his wages boosted recently — to $60 a month.

He also gets board and lodging but said: "We do not get enough to eat. Most evenings I am still hungry when I go to bed."

His assistants in the garden, who has been working there for six years, earns $40 a month.

The owner of the house drives a Rolls Royce.

Women domestic workers have begun to speak out about their grievances. The gardeners, however, are more reticent, their anger muted by sullen resentment and even fear.

"What can we do?" they ask, shrugging their shoulders in resignation. "We are black-skinned."

"I keep saying I will ask the master for more money," said one man, "but I have not yet done so."

When another plucked up the courage, he was told that the $45 he earns was "already too much."

Nearly all of them are migrant labourers who under the country's influx control laws only get permission to work in particular categories — in this case as gardeners. Domestic work generally is not popular among men and local workers can get other and more profitable jobs.

Many of those who have taken to the work resent having to do household chores as well. The majority have to work in the house from 6:30 to 10 in the morning and again in the evenings.

Most spend some of their days off hanging around cafes and bottle stores in the area, for all are separated from their families.

The man who has been working for 40 years has seen his wife and children only one month a year during this period.

It is the same with the others, although some arrange for their wives to stay with them for a few weeks at a time.

"I would like to see my children growing up," said one man sadly. "But they live far away and it is too expensive for me to go there often."

All of them get paid leave but bonuses are practically unknown.

The plight of the gardener was summed up by the man who said: "I feel I am like Jesus Christ, weighed down by the cross I have to bear on my back."

Saigon Refused $40M by IMF

WASHINGTON (WP) — Shortly before Saigon fell on April 30, the South Vietnamese government made a desperate attempt to withdraw $40 million in South Vietnamese deposits from the International Monetary Fund. The request was not approved by the IMF.

An IMF spokesman confirmed Sunday that the Saigon government had requested a "drawing" but he refused further comment, saying that the IMF does not discuss details of drawings that have not been made.

Although the Saigon government presumed it was entitled, unconditionally, to borrow about $20 million against its own quota (deposits) in the IMF, there were technical problems in approving the transter.

Most imprtantly, as the political situation deteriorated in Saigon, and the government changed hands rapidly, there was doubt about the legitimacy of the request and a fear that a successor government — the Provisional Revolutionary Government — might accuse the IMF of helping to dissipate the nation's monetary reserves.

On April 23, two days after President Nguyen Van Thieu resigned and was succeeded by Tran Van Huong, the Saigon government cabled the IMF. (It was not clear if the cable had been formulated while Thieu was in power.) The cable requested two things: First, a borrowing of hard currency against its "tranche" or total quota in the fund. Normally, it would be entitled to an unconditional loan against the 25 per cent of the tranche that is supposed to be deposited in gold.

Second, it wanted to cash in its holdings of Special Drawing Rights (SDRs), which also amounted to about $20 million, taking actual currency instead of the SDRs, which are a kind of book-keeping credit.

If both requests had been granted, the IMF would have transferred $40 million in cash, most likely in dollars, to the former South Vietnam authorites.

The IMF executive board met on April 25 to discuss the request. Several sources indicate that a majority felt the request should be honored, but only after a confirmation of the fiscal "quality" of the agent making the request — that is, the Central Bank.

A cable to the Minister of Finance on April 25 asking for confirmation of the Central Bank's request went unanswered. By that time, Gen. Duong Van Minh had taken over, and — it is assumed here — the minister of finance probably did not want to pursue the request, not wishing to antagonize Hanoi.

A minority of the IMF executive board, at the April 25 meeting, was in favor of turning down (or at least delaying) the Saigon government's request because they feared Thieu or his associates would abscond with the money. The basic aim of these governments, mostly in the Pacific region, was to assure future good relations with North Vietnam.

The technical difficulty with the Saigon request for a drawing against the Vietnam gold "tranche" was two-fold. First, South Vietnam had never fully paid in its 25 per cent of gold; and second, there was no legal exchange rate for the South Vietnam piastre.

When a country makes a drawing against its own tranche or quota, it receives another currency — say, dollars. For the dollars, it is supposed to deposit an equivalent amount of its own currency, to balance the IMF books. But since there was no real rate for the piastre, there was (and is) no way to figure out what a loan on this basis might be. Saigon could have asked to withdraw from the fund, and have its gold deposits returned, but did not.

On the SDRs, the normal procedure is to arrange with some other government to put up the currencies desired by the borrowing government. This normally takes only two or three days. "But the problem," explains one insider, "was that there was no public order in Saigon, and no one knew to whom the money would be transferred."

Assistant Treasury Secretary Charles Cooper told The Washington Post Sunday that the U.S. had supported the view that the request was a legitimate one, and that it should be honored. But the U.S. recognized the technical problems, and did not oppose the mood within the IMF executive board that the legitimacy of the fiscal agent had to be checked.

Cooper said that the U.S. did not believe that some unauthorized person might run off with the money. "The money is supposed to be on call, and they wanted to use it," Cooper said.

CDC Financially Strong, To Offer Public Shares

VANCOUVER (UPI) — Canada Development Corporation President Anthony Hampson Friday announced the CDC finished its third year of operations in a strong financial position, and will offer its first public share issue in about four months.

The CDC, created by a federal act of Parliament to develop Canadian owned enterprise, ended 1974 with no debt, a working capital of $42 million and shareholders' equity of over $548 million.

The company added $150 million to its capital base in 1974 and increased retained earnings by $54 million.

Its net income rose to $59 million from under $19 million in 1973 and, apart from preferred dividends of $4.7 million, was all reinvested in growth, the corporation's annual report said.

CDC directors decided not to proceed with a public offering of shares in 1974 because of difficult and uncertain conditions of financial markets, the report said.

Hampson said a survey of Canadian investors last year showed a great interest in participation in the CDC. The corporation has decided to offer an undisclosed number of shares for public sale, "sometime shortly after Labor Day (Sept. 1)," he said.

There will be a buying limit of three per cent of the issue for the private sector, while the government retains the right to purchase up to 10 per cent.

The CDC has holdings in the petrochemical field with a 100 per cent ownership of Polysar Ltd., operating in North America and Europe natural resources with a 30 per cent interest in Texasgulf Ltd., operating in North America and Australia Health Care Pipelines venture capital and short-term investments.

Its consolidated assets at the end of 1974 were almost $900 million up 28 per cent from the previous year.

About one-third of CDC's gains in 1974 resulted from its Texasgulf holdings. The corporation's earnings rose to record levels last year as did those of Polysar.

The CDC has announced its provisional interest in subscribing for $100 million of equity securities in the Canadian Arctic gas pipeline project, subject to government approval of construction of the pipeline from the MacKenzie Delta and Alaska to Canada and the U.S.

$500M in Loans For Soviet Sales

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The Canadian government's Export Development Corporation will make available up to $500 million in loans to assist Canadian exporters in selling capital goods, equipment and services to USSR purchasing agencies.

Industry Trade and Commerce Minister Alastair Gillespie announced the line of credit to Russia Friday at a ceremony in the Commonwealth Room of the parliament buildings. He refused to disclose the interest that will be charged saying it was customary in such international negotiations to keep the interest rate confidential.

Canadian chartered banks will be invited to participate with EDC in each loan to the USSR Bank for Foreign Trade. The agreement calls for a portion of the credit to be taken up within a year and the balance within two years. It is the largest line of credit ever extended by EDC.

V. S. Alkhimov, deputy minister of foreign trade for the USSR was present for the signing of the agreement. It provides for loans for transactions involving the purchase of high-technology capital equipment and related services from Canadian suppliers.

Soviet foreign trade and bank officials have been in Ottawa during the past week. In that time the details of the agreement were concluded with officials of EDC. John MacDonald newly named president of the EDC was also present for the ceremony at which domestic champagne was served.

The Soviet team in addition to Alkhimov included A. R. Makeev, deputy chairman of the Bank for Foreign Trade and V. N. Myshkov head of the USSR trade representation in Canada. The Soviet Ambassador A. N. Yakolev attended the signing ceremony.

It was made clear that the line of credit does not apply to grain purchases but to capital goods and equipment.

"We have been happy to supply our grains and raw materials to the Soviet Union for so many years but we are even more pleased that they now have recognized our capability to produce sophisticated machinery and equipment," said Gillespie.

Trade developments with the USSR in recent months have been most encouraging, he said.

"Already $30 million in contracts have been signed for machinery and equipment. These contracts cover things like valves, off-highway vehicles, compressors and log skidders.

"We see excellent opportunities for further substantial sales of machinery and equipment for the pulp and paper industry, for forestry equipment, oil and gas equipment and machinery and equipment for transportation and mining industries," said Gillespie.

The minister said the negotiations for contracts under the new agreement will be speeded by the visit to Canada May 15 of a delegation of senior Soviet trade officials. The delegation will be headed by V. N. Sushkov, deputy minister of the foreign trade ministry.

Canada Gains at Sea Law Talks

By IAIN MacDONALD

GENEVA (CP) — Canada's desire to establish a more rational method of controlling the fisheries off its coasts than now exists has been brought closer to realization by developments at the United Nations Law of the Sea conference.

Alan Beesley, Canada's main negotiator in the eight-week conference session here, says he is "particularly pleased at our progress on solving fisheries problems."

He is referring to a group of positions taken by the conference in the three informal single negotiating text that were issued at the close of the Geneva session.

These texts, produced by the three committees into which conference subjects were divided for discussion, give an indication of how the 141 participant countries are thinking as they seek agreement on a new all-encompassing law of the sea.

The basic item that underpins Canada's aims regarding fisheries is the acceptance in the informal text of the Canadian position on the continental shelf of coastal states.

Canada wanted an economic zone of 200 nautical miles from its shoreline in which it would have exclusive rights to explore and exploit the natural resources of the continental shelf and management and control rights over fishing. It further wanted recognition in any new law of the rights of Canada over those parts of its continental shelf that stretch in parts to 600 miles off its Atlantic coast.

The conference text fully accepts the continental shelf sovereign rights as sought by Canada.

It also sets the exclusive economic zone at 200 nautical miles, as Canada wished, and gives coastal states sovereign rights for exploring and exploiting, conserving and managing renewable and non-renewable natural resources of the waters and sea bed within that zone.

A 200-mile exclusive economic zone is not the same as the territorial waters of a state, which in Canada's case have extended for 12 miles from its shores since 1970.

In the zone, the coastal state "shall determine the allowable catch of the living resources" which is exactly what Canada has been seeking to counter the drastic over-fishing that has been taking place by foreign fleets off Canada's east and west coasts.

The particular problem of salmon fishing is mentioned in the conference text in a manner that concurs with Canada's interests.

Coastal states would be given responsibility for such stocks and the right, after consultation with other states fishing the stocks, to set total allowable catches for salmon stocks originating in the coastal state's rivers.

This is a matter of importance to all Canadians because Canada pursues a highly-professional and expensive salmon control system that involves the loss of potential hydroelectric power through letting some rivers run without damming and the outlay of tax funds. A quarter of a billion dollars has been spent so far and a further $350 million has been committed.

Canadian fishermen have been becoming more and more angry at the energetic fishing of salmon and other fish by the Japanese and Danes. The argument is that unrestrained fishing of species such as salmon sharply reduced the number that can return to Canadian rivers to spawn, posing a major threat to Canada's social fabric as fishermen become unemployed and desert their coastal villages.

Canada would be delighted if Japan and Denmark suddenly lost their collective desire to eat salmon but since this won't happen, aims instead for a sharp restriction on the taking of salmon to conserve the numbers and give Canadian fishermen their fair share of catches.

Some of the fish that cause dispute are known as highly migratory species, such as tuna, swordfish and whales, and they roam far beyond the proposed 200-mile exclusive economic zone.

Canada was anxious that machinery should be established so that coastal states could negotiate with other states fishing these stocks beyond 200 miles so as to ensure reasonable conservation. This is specifically mentioned in the text.

The broad outlines of new international laws that would give Canada the power to conserve and safeguard its endangered fisheries are therefore developing in the Law of the Sea conference.

SHERMAN HONORED

Dr. Marion Sherman of 2901 Sea View has been named the Canadian Humanist of the year by the Canadian branch of the Humanist Association.

Dr. Sherman will go to Ottawa next month for the presentation.

Sea Conference Sees Dangers In 'Aladdin's Cave' of Riches

GENEVA (CP) — As the world's largest producers and exporters of nickel, Canada is deeply interested in an orderly exploitation of the Aladdin's cave of nickel-rich manganese nodules waiting to be harvested from the sea-bed.

Each potato-shaped nodule contains nickel, manganese, copper and cobalt and one estimate of their value is $74 a ton with 1.5 trillion tons laying on the floor of the Pacific alone and being added to at the rate of six million tons a year.

The potenial for severely damaging a part of Canada's economy and turning places like Sudbury into ghost towns is obvious.

The United Nations Law of the Sea conference has considered this danger and written in safeguards into an informal text it has now produced that will be a basis for continuing negotiations on a new treaty that would establish an international sea bed authority.

Part of the authority would be an economic planning commission which would watch the trends in demand, supply and prices and take economic action to ensure that a flood of one specific mineral was not allowed to destroy markets and national economies.

This is a vital point for Canada, which also exports copper and cobalt, as it is for Chile, whose main export is copper.

From the other point of view, Canada itself exploiting the sea bed mineral wealth, the informal text's ruling on sovereign rights of coastal states on their continental shelf gives Canada a considerable edge on many other states.

While Canada would benefit from the proposed 200-mile economic zone, in which foreign countries would need Canadian acquiescence before fishing or exploiting other resources, the wording of the relevant section also would give Canada sovereign rights over the parts of its continental shelf that stretch for up to 600 miles off the Atlantic coast.

This involves extra undersea territory of about 400,000 square miles.

It is the aim of the conference that the deep ocean sea bed will yield its riches for the "common heritage of mankind" through a general fund to be administered by the international sea-bed authority.

A Canadian initiative has been incorporated into the text section dealing with resources exploited in the continental shelf beyond the economic zone.

This would mean a sharing of the wealth taken from this region, the money going to authority for distribution to the poorer developing countries.

External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen said during his Geneva visit last week that one of Canada's conditions for agreeing to such wealth-sharing would be that contributions "would go primarily to the developing countries, particularly the least-developed amongst them".

Canada's claim to enormous areas of continental shelf has drawn criticisms of greed from members of Third World delegations, particularly Africans. Their line is that Canada wants too much of the mineral riches on the sea bed.

But some of these African coastal states who wanted the 200-mile economic zone did not want anything written in that would require them to let any other country catch any fish at all in their zones.

In fact, the more reasonable Canadian line prevailed, which provides access to other fishing states where the coastal state does not have the capacity to harvest an entire allowable catch of a given species.

Canada's claims on the continental shelf, as far as 600 miles out in some places, is based on the development of international legal practice since the last war.

In 1945, U.S. President Harry Truman issued a proclamation unilaterally declaring that the United States has the sole right to explore and exploit its continental shelves. This had no basis in law but it became accepted practice and law by passage of time, which is the way that international law has tended to develop.

In 1958, a continental shelf convention was internationally agreed that enshrined the Truman proclamation in international law and it was ratified by over 40 states including Canada.

Canada's legal claims over its continental shelf were further reinforced by a 1969 case in the International Court of Justice in which a ruling was made that the continental shelf is the submerged natural prolorgation of the continental land territory. The case had been brought to establish rights over th North Sea continental shelves.

Highly Ranked Chinese In Paris

PARIS (AP) — Chinese Vice-Premier Teng Hsiao-ping, now No. 3 in the Peking hierarchy, was received with head-of-state honors today at the start of a week-long visit to France during which he is expected to urge Europe to unite against the Soviet Union.

With Mao Tse-tung and Chou En-lai ill, Teng is the highest ranking Chinese official able to travel and the highest ever to visit western Europe.

The 70-year-old vice-premier, Chou's heir apparent, was accompanied by Foreign Minister Chiao Kuan-hua and 18 other officials. They were met at the airport by French Premier Jacques Chirac and Foreign Minister Jean Sauvagnargues. Teng and Chirac were to start talks immediately.

Teng, also vice-chairman of the Communist party in China and chief of the army general staff, is to meet twice with President Valery Giscard d'Estaing.

No formal agenda was set for the talks but French officials believe the Chinese party wants to discuss what China sees as an increasing Soviet threat to Europe and Asia. France's key role in the European Common Market takes on particular importance as China has made clear it wants to see the market and Western Europe strong against the Soviet Union and its allies. Peking has agreed to send an ambassador to the market's Brussels headquarters.

The Chinese moves toward Western Europe coincide with the windup of the Indochina wars, and observers think they might well constitute a diversion against any Soviet initiatives in Vietnam.

Other world events also are likely to be on the talk schedule, along with development of bilateral trade. Teng said at the airport that relations between France and China have "developed unceasingly" since their establishment in 1964. He said it was because of his "sincere desire to see them develop further that I am making this visit."

In Paris, Teng will stay in the refurbished Marigny villa, normally reserved for heads of state, across the road from the president's Elysee palace.

It will be a striking Parisian contrast for Teng, who lived here for five years as a student and worker in the early 1920s, working alongside Chou En-lai in a shoe plant and later at the Renault auto workers.

Snowbirds swoop over legislative buildings last year

Maypole Dance Opens 'Days'

Organized, as in past years, by the Municipal Chapter of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire, the children will sing and dance around a maypole and place flowers at the base of Queen Victoria's monument.

The singing will be led by a massed choir from Braefoot, Cloverdale, Lampson and McKenzie schools, accompanied by the band of S. J. Willis school.

The Canadian armed forces' presence will be strong with more than 800 members taking part in a variety of events, ranging from a torchlight parade to the crowning of the May Queen.

Focus will be on the Victoria waterfront Saturday when the Skyhawks, the armed forces' free-fall team from Edmonton, will jump from a Buffalo aircraft over Beacon Hill Park at 10:40 a.m.

The Skyhawks — two officers and seven non-commissioned officers — are commanded by Lt.-Col. Gil Bellavance of North Battleford, Sask. They will jump from an altitude of 10,000 feet, the "target" being the park's soccer field.

The Snowbirds, based at Moose Jaw, Sask., using red and white Tudor jet trainers, will begin performing over the park at 11 a.m. They appeared in 82 aerial shows across Canada and the United States in 1974.

They will carry out a 27-minute routine of loops, rolls, cross-overs and twinkle rolls, led by Major Denis Gauthier.

Lieut. Ed Pala, CFB Esquimalt's base physical education and recreation officer, will command the Victoria Day Parade on the Monday.

The Canadian Forces Naden Band and a 68-member base color party will lead the parade.

Other marching units will include the 5th (B.C.) Field Battery, Royal Canadian Artillery; the Canadian Scottish (Princess Mary's) Regiment, the Rainbow Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps, Patricia Dufour navy League Wrenette Corps, Admiral Rayner Navy League Cadet Corps, Admiral Budge Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps and the 2289 Royal Canadian Army Cadet Corps.

Others marching will be the 2136 Royal Canadian Army Cadet Corps, 2483 Royal Canadian Army Cadet Corps 800 Wing of the Royal Canadian Air Force Association, 89th Royal Canadian Air Cadet Squadron, a color party from the Royal Canadian Legion and a marching contingent from Vancouver's British Ex-Servicemen Club (Royal Canadian Legion).

On Sunday afternoon the Naden band will give a concert at 2 p.m. in Centennial Square and a colorful sunset ceremony will be carried out at 8:45 p.m. in the square that evening.

The ceremony will be performed by the 3rd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry.

Following the ceremony the battalion will lead a torchlight parade from the city hall, south on Douglas to Yates and south on Government to Superior, next to the legislative buildings.

Taking part in the parade will be a fire baton Majorettes troop, fire engines from the four core municipalities, as well as one from CFB Esquimalt's dockyard.

The parade will lead to the Causeway where the PPCLI will pick up the May Queen, her Princesses, civic and provincial leaders, taking them from the Empress Hotel to the legislative buildings.

At 10:30 p.m. a 15-minute fireworks display will be fired from the CPR wharf in the Inner Harbor, following the crowning of the queen.

At noon on the Monday, the 5th (B.C.) Field Artillery, RCA, will fire a 21-gun royal salute in honor of Queen Victoria.

Two visiting bands will perform between 3 and 5 p.m. in the bandshell of Kinsmen Gorge Park on Sunday while the Greater Victoria Celebrations Association's canoe, bathtub, dinghy and kayak races are taking place. The Rainbow Corps is assisting with the running of the regatta.

DIVERS FIND $50M

CHICAGO (Reuter) — Volunteer scuba divers searching a river dam in the Chicago suburb of Des Plaines for the bodies of two teen-agers have found a strong box containing stolen bonds worth more than $50 million.

Inside the waterlogged trunk were 4,198 bonds believed to have been stolen last August from a suburban Chicago printing firm, Northern Bank Note Co.

The documents were public improvement bonds printed for Houston, Tex., with a face value at maturity in 1984 of more than $50 million.

An FBI spokesman said the bonds were not negotiable because they lacked one signature, but they could have been used by criminals as collateral to secure loans.

The body of one of the teen-agers was found Saturday and the search for the second is continuing.

U.K. Economy, ECM Challenging Wilson

LONDON (Reuter) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson faced two vital problems today after making a major attempt to restore confidence in the British economy and reassert his political leadership.

The two issues are:

—Overseas reaction to his assertion that Britain's grave economic problems are not getting worse, and —The reaction of his Labor party's turbulent left wing to his hint that he may have to take tough action against dissident anti-Common Market ministers.

In an hour-long television interview Sunday, he made an obvious reference to the anti-Europe stance of Industry Minister Tony Benn and other senior ministers who, he declared, would have to comply with government policy if Britain votes to continue Common Market membership in a referendum next month.

There has been widespread speculation that Wilson intends to move the controversial leftwing Benn from the sensitive industry portfolio. His plans for massive state intervention have drawn increasing ciriticism.

Wilson made no mention of this Sunday, but he described Benn, a leading anti-Common Marketer, as "an Old testament prophet, without a beard, who talks about the new Jerusalem."

Wilson returned to Britain from a two-week absence in Jamaica and Washington last week tob e confronted with a menacing economic crisis.

His return came against a background of a steady drop in the value of the British pound to record-low levels, continuing high inflation, an threats of non co-operation from industrialists angered by attacks from left-wing ministers.

In both television and radio broadcasts Sunday, he sought to dismiss the economic alarm, suggested a new move to tackle inflation, and hinted at a crackdown against the dissident left wingers next month.

Boxers First City Club to Win Cup

VANCOUVER — Add London Boxing Club's name to the list of Victoria teams that have carved memorable niches in provincial soccer history.

The Boxers became the first Victoria-area team to win the Province Cup when they defeated North Shore Paul's 4-1 Sunday.

Victory gives Boxers a chance for greater glory. As British Columbia's champions, the team will represent the province in the Dominion Challenge Cup playdowns.

Coached by George Fox and managed by Bill Barr, Boxers are scheduled to play Alberta's winners in June for the right to represent the far-west regional in the four-team Challenge Cup final.

Manitoba-Saskatchewan, Quebec-Ontario and Maritimes-Newfoundland will supply the other finalists.

Boxing Club is only the third Vancouver Island team to win the provincial trophy. Cumberland and Nanaimo teams won the Province Cup in the early days of the competition.

A Victoria Evcoe team reached the Cup final in the late 1950s but bowed to Vancouver Firefighters in a thriller at Royal Athletic Park.

While winger Dean Stokes led Victoria's scoring with three goals, Barr and Fox both agreed Sunday's victory was a "complete team effort."

"I don't think you can single out one or two players without doing injustice to the others," said Barr. "Dean got us going ... Bob Bolitho, (Brian) Robinson and (Ron) Thompson played like the internationals they are ... Young (Dan) Lomas was a going concern ... And Kjeld Brodsgaard did the job in goal ...

"A great team."

Stokes' goals at 15 and 34 minutes staked Boxers to a 2-0 halftime lead. Pauls, the B.C. (mainland) league's 1975 champs, seemed to get a life when Buzz Parsons got one back in the 58th minute.

Moments after Parsons' goal, North Shore came right back but Brodsgaard made an outstanding save of a labelled shot. When Stokes added his final goal in the 64th minute, North Shore's brief revival ended.

While neither Barr nor Fox commented on it, Boxers' strong performance may have been a discreet way of thumbing their noses at the B.C. Soccer Commission.

Both London Boxing Club and Gorge Molsons were "deported" from the B.C. League's Premier Division and, contrary to their wishes, ordered to play in the Vancouver Island League under a new regional setup instituted by the B.C. Commission.

Boxing Club officials admitted Sunday they may ask the commission for reinstatement as a B.C. League member next season.

In the meantime, the Boxers will concentrate on the Challenge Cup.

B.C. teams normally wind up their season at this time while the rest of Canada is just beginning regular soccer activity. Because of their success the Boxers will remain intact and stretch out their season by at least a month, or more.

A Double Dousing For Army

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Coach George Armstrong took a shower Sunday, then went for an unscheduled swim — both with his clothes on and both courtesy of his Memorial Cup-champion Toronto Marlboros.

The grey-haired veteran of many a National Hockey League battle had just seen the Marlboros defeat New Westminster Bruins 7-3 in the final for the Canadian major junior hockey championshio.

"They always start out a bit slow," Armstrong said of the Marlboros who trailed 2-0 late in the first period before scoring two in 33 seconds to tie the game. The Marlboros then went ahead 5-3 after 40 minutes and scored both goals in the final period to claim their second Memorial Cup in three years and seventh in their history.

The Marlboros threw Amstrong into the shower and then into the hotel swimming pool in the traditional post-victory hijinks.

Armstrong said he was "concerned" before the game. Six times during the season the Marlboros faced sudden death on the ice.

But six times the Marlboros, Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A champions, came out on top, stretching their quarter, semi and final series in the playoffs to all but one game short of the limit and winning, then emerging winners in a sudden-death game Friday night with Sherbrooke Beavers.

Toronto's Gary Carr was named the tournament's top goaltender and Barry Smith, a forward with the Bruins, was given the most valuable player award.

Smith, Claude Larose of Sherbrooke and Anderson formed the tournament's all-star team's forward line, Mike Kitchen of Toronto and Brad Maxwell were named to the defence and Carr was chosen as goalie.

Islanders Poised To Do It Again?

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Fresh and strong, New York Islanders have turned the tables on Philadelphia Flyers, tying their semi-final series 3-3 and leaving the distinct impression that the Stanley Cup champions are about to be dethroned.

"Stanley Cup or bust," said a disillusioned Dave Schultz of the Flyers, who didn't get a penalty but played badly Sunday as the Islanders beat his club 2-1 to force a deciding game in their best-of-seven National Hockey League series.

The Islanders, who overcame a 3-0 deficit to win their quarter-final with Pittsburgh Penguins, were on the verge of an identical turn-around against the Flyers.

NHL president Clarence Campbell said the Islanders' surprising performance has been great for expansion hockey.

"Never has a team faced the axe so many times," Campbell said. "It's a feat no team will ever duplicate again."

The Islanders have never stopped nibbling away, tiring and frustrating the Flyers until they are fatigued both mentally and physically.

It was defenceman Gerry Hart who scored the winning goal early in the third period of Sunday's game.

The seventh game in Philadelphia on Tuesday night will decide who faces Buffalo Sabres in the final. The Sabres completed a 4-2 semi-final win over Montreal Canadiens Thursday night in Montreal.

No club has ever won two series after being down 3-0. Only one, Toronto Maple Leafs, did it even once before the Islanders. The Leafs accomplished their comeback in the 1942 final against Detroit Red Wings.

Coach Al Arbour of the Islanders agreed with Philadelphia coach Fred Shero that being away from home means nothing in the deciding game of a series.

"But it should be interesting, a very tough game," said Arbour. "Everything is built up into one game, and I think you could play the game in Moscow and it wouldn't really matter."

Almost to a man, the Flyers were a deeply disappointed team after their third loss in a row to the Islanders.

Even Shero found it hard to rationalize the losses and the ensuing humiliations the Islanders have piled on the champions.

Shero went into great detail to explain the mistakes in his team's positional play and admitted that some of his players are hurt, but wouldn't say who they are.

The injuries obviously have affected his power lines, which seem to have lost their offensive punch.

The Flyer power-play has failed to produce a goal in its last 18 chances.

Glenn Resch, the little goalie, has been playing brilliantly for the Islanders. Against the Penguins, he was in goal for all four New York wins, as he has been in all of his team's victories in the semi-final.

Flyer captain Bobby Clarke, battered and tired and sporting a cut over his left eye, was particularly depressed. He could offer no real explanation for his team's sudden slide.

"The Islanders are blocking a lot of shots and we got no offence at all hardly," said Clarke. "Whatever we have, they've taken away.

"If you don't have an offence, you're not going to win."

Stevenson, Holness Spark Bates' Sweep

By ERNIE FEDROUK
Times Staff

The private-life bond between Harvey Stevenson and Bob Holness is maintained by their wives, who happen to be sisters.

On the playing field, the Victoria Bate veterans leaned on their bats Sunday to display a common bond.

The lusty clouting by Holness and Stevenson provided the winning edge in each outing as Bates swept a four-game Pacific Coast Men's Fastball League series from North Vancouver Vikings.

Holness started it all with a two-run single that provided pitcher Dave Ruthowsky with a 2-1 decision in the series' opener at Royal Athletic Park.

Stevenson went 3-for-3, including a solo homer, and Holness batted 2-for-2 in the second, a 9-0 rout that went to Stan Kern.

Holness opened third-game scoring with a home run and Stevenson wrapped it up with a two-ru double to help 17-year-old Larry Cole claim his first pitching decision in the four-team league, 4-1.

Finally, Stevenson unloaded a three-run homer and Halness again batted 2-for-2 in the finale. It also wound up 4-1, with the fireballing Kern claiming his second decision of the day.

A weekend series on the mainland between Vancouver Magicians and New Westminster Royal Towers was postponed because of weather.

OLD-TIMER SOCCER WON BY LADNER

Mike de Turberville set the pace for Oak Bay with four goals. Pierre Mercier added two and singles were fired by Dave Stothard and John Weaver.

Ladner gained the final of the four-team tourney by posting a 4-0 triumph over Oak Bay on Saturday while Victoria advanced with a 2-0 decision over Vancouver.

BURNABY — Victoria McDonalds, trailing 12-10 at the end of the second period, fell apart in the final 20 minutes and bowed 24-12 to Burnaby Cablevision in their opening Western Canada Major Junior Lacrosse League game here Sunday night before 900 fans.

Kelly McLenaghen led Cables with six goals, Eric Cowieson added four and double tallies were recorded by Dan Perreault, Hartley Olson, Ken Crompton and Randy Delmonico. Single goals went to Matt Aitken, Mike Holden, Roy Semlacher, Dereck Dickson, Terry Bingley and John Krgovich.

Kevin Alexander led Victoria with five goals and three assists while Lorry Glockner fired two. Bob Cool, Norm Baker, Joe Mottishaw, Roy Sinden and Mike Bryson counted one each.

A brawl near the end of the second period was "won" by Victoria, but it proved to be the last victorious note of the evening for the Island club.

Seaboard Lone Unbeaten Club

Ranks of the undefeated were reduced to one in the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League at the weekend.

Previously-unbeaten Nanaimo and Port Angeles both suffered their setbacks Sunday to leave idle Seaboard Construction the only team with an unblemished record.

Ingraham Hotel swept a Central Park doubleheader, 9-0 and 4-3, while Mike's Sports Shop upset Nanaimo 1-0 behind the four-hit pitching of Larry Meyers.

Nanaimo, however, took two other games from the visiting Victoria team, 2-1 and 10-0.

Sooke Merchants also posted a Sunday sweep, defeating Tony's Holdings 4-2 and 1-0 at Sooke.

Stan Pritchard fired a one-hitter as Metro Toyota trounced Molsons 20-0 in a Heywood Avenue Men's League encounter. Molsons downed William Head 15-13 earlier in the day.

AEROS EYE TITLE BUT LOSE SHIRTS

QUEBEC (CP) — Houston Aeros could win their second straight World Hockey Association title here tonight, but could also wind up as the only championship team leaving town without its shirts.

The Aeros took a big step toward the title Saturday night with a 2-0 win over Quebec Nordiques — a win that gave them a commanding 3-0 lead in the best-of-seven final.

The Aeros, who won the first two games of the series 6-2 and 5-3 in Houston, fashioned the victory on the strength of goals by right winger Frank Hughes, a powerplay effort at the 14-second mark of the second period, and defenceman Poul Popeil in the third.

In addition, Houston goaltender Ron Grahame, a native of Victoria, recorded his third shutout of the current playoffs with a strong performance. Grahame turned back 34 shots by the Nordiques, while Richard Brodeur allowed the two Houston goals on 24 shots by the Aeros.

But the Aeros had little opportunity to savor the victory they won by their strong two-way performances.

No sooner had they retired to their dressing room than bailiffs, armed with a Quebec Superior Court injunction on behalf of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, arrived to seize the Houston equipment.

The CAHA, the governing body of amateur hockey in Canada, had obtained the injunction in an effort to collect $35,000 it claims the Houston club owes it for junior development fees.

The Aeros are one of several United States-based WHA teams that owe the CAHA a total of $195,000 in development money for drafted juniors. Houston still has not paid for centre Terry Ruskowski and right winger Don Larway.

All the Canadian-based clubs have paid the CAHA for players they drafted.

However, John Dacres, president of the Nordiques, stepped in to post his personal guarantee covering the hold order on the Aeros equipment, thus allowing the Houston club to use it at practice Sunday.

In addition to the seizure of the Aeros equipment, the CAHA injunction also called for a hold on the portion of gate receipts normally slated for the WHA and the Aeros.

Dennis Murphy of Los Angeles, scheduled to retire as WHA president next month, said he had been served "with a pile of papers," but had turned the matter over to lawyers here.

"We will appear in court tomorrow (Monday) and post bond, after that it's up to the courts to decide," Murphy said.

City Sides Win

Albion dropped Cowichan by 52 runs at Beacon Hill Park and Alcos topped Incogs by eight wickets at Windsor Park on Sunday while Castaways humbled Saltspring Island by 173 runs Saturday at Beacon Hill.

Albion batted first and reached 106 runs. Tony Quorless was the leading batsman for Albion with 58 runs while Howard Martin led Cowichan bowlers by taking four wickets for the loss of only 15 runs. Tim Lord of Cowichan took four for 25.

Cowichan was all out at 54 with Howard Dixon supplying 18 runs. Alan Carter (five for 18) and Alex Porter (three for 11) paced Albion bowlers.

Incogs were all out for 76 against some excellent bowling by Steve Hanson, who toppled six for 26. Max Kent (31) and David Bolton (16) were the leading batsmen.

Alcos then made 80 for two wickets at John Schoefield (28 not out), John Moss (23 not out) and Hanson (23) showed the way.

Playing on a rain-soaked pitch, Castaways ran up 231 for nine before dismissing Saltspring for 58.

Dave Philip counted 74 runs to lead Castaways while Dave Shaw added 33 not out. Gary Jones topped Saltspring batsmen with 24 runs against the superb bowling of Dave Clarke (three for seven) and Shaw (two for six).

Next matches in the eight-team, round-robin tournament for the Knockout Cup are scheduled for May 31 and June 1.

GYMNASTICS TITLES WON BY CITY TRIO

Stock Cars Rained Out, Go Tonight

A delay in the arrival of parts for his new car kept Gary Kershaw out of the first three super stock races of the season at Western Speedway.

He was all set to go Saturday night but was foiled again, this time by rain. Wet weather forced cancellation of the card.

Kershaw and the rest of the stock car drivers get another chance at Western tonight, however. Saturday's program has been rescheduled to start at 7 p.m. with time trials followed by racing at 8.

Crown Captured By Host School

Central walked off with the title while playing host to the inaugural Greater Victoria junior high school girls' gymnastics championship Saturday.

The host school accumulated 154 points while Colquitz was second with 118, S. J. Willis third with 109, Arbutus fourth with (104) and Shoreline fifth with 44.

Katy Clark captured the novice title and was the only over-all winner from Central. Kelly Garner of Shoreline was runner-up and Pam Goode of Arbutus finished third.

Jan McLean of Arbutus emerged as the junior champion followed by Bernie Shiphorst and Vicki Sotheran, both of Central.

Bev McLean picked up the elite laurels, Jennifer Cumerbatch of S. J. Willis was second and Terry Glas of Arbutus third.

Full House Sees Twins Take Cup

THUNDER BAY (CP) — Thunder Bay Twins won the Allan Cup Saturday night when they defeated the defending-champion Barrie Flyers, 8-4, before a standing-room only crowd of 5,040 to take the series four games to two.

The Flyers, who trailed 5-3 after two periods, came within a goal of catching up early in the third period, but the Twins came back with three goals within five minutes to put the game out of reach.

Tom Deacon and Dave Bragnalo each scored classic tallies, tucking the puck behind Flyer goalkeeper Glen Cole on three-way passing plays. Then at 9:50, Murray McLeod ended the scoring when he took a pass from Gord Linquist and beat Cole cleanly in a two-on-one situation.

It was the third straight win for the Twins.

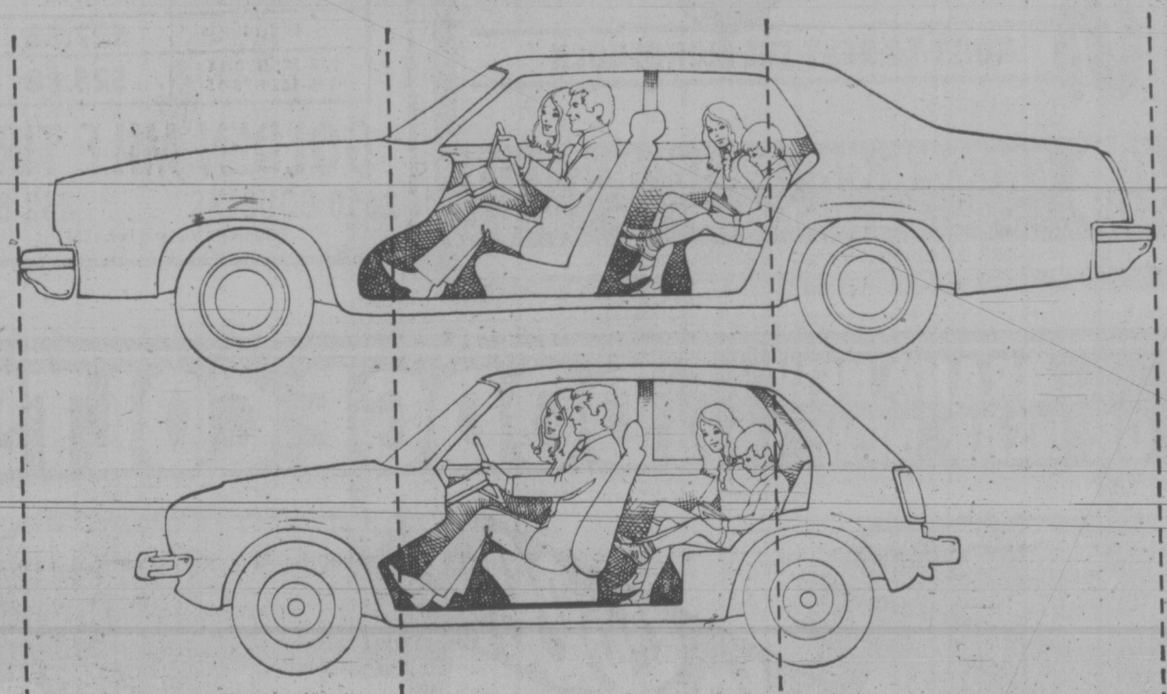
First we built a mid-size car inside. Then we built a sub-compact around it.



Most cars are built the other way around. Body style first; passenger comfort second. Which is why in the back seat of so many cars, your head slants forward. Or your knees meet your chest. Or you shift positions sitting over the hump every time you hit a bump.

At Honda, we've virtually eliminated these problems. Because we designed our car from the inside out. What we ended up with is a sub-compact car with as much room as some mid-size cars. The experts have described our car best.

"Many makes talk about small on the outside, big on the inside, but Honda has done it." (Road and Track).

How'd we do it? Our car's shape is trapezoidal. A rectangle that's wider at the bottom than the top for all kinds of good reasons. For example, we give you more room where you really need it. More leg room on the floor and more seating room.

Another part of our roominess story is also a performance story. We gave our car front-wheel drive, not just to eliminate the hump inside, but for its excellent road-hugging ability.

Then we mounted the engine sideways to provide even more space. This also places the engine weight directly over the drive wheels for better traction. For added comfort, we equipped the Civic with a McPherson strut suspension, independent on all four wheels, for a stable yet cushioning ride.

The Honda Civic is more car than you'd expect. It's fast and yet it's economical to run. In fact, in the 1975 U.S. Environmental Protection Agency gas mileage test, the Honda Civic recorded a remarkable 49.2 miles per gallon for highway driving and 33.6 miles per gallon for in-city driving. Now, just try and find another car that performed as well.

Oak Bay Takes Shutout Route

KAMLOOPS — Oak Bay Barbarians blanked every opponent in preliminary play, then shut out Port Coquitlam 15-0 Saturday to retain the B.C. high school spring rugby championship.

Oak Bay defeated Princess Margaret 9-0 in the semi-finals and in Friday's round-robin play downed Eliphinstone of the Lower Mainland 33-0, Lord Tweedsmuir of Cloverdale 13-0 and Kelowna, 13-0.

Foster accounted for 30 points in the round-robin play and led Barbarians against Coquitlam with two tries and a penalty goal. Hibbert converted both the tries.

Albernt, a 15-9 loser to Princess Margaret, placed fourth.

Tweedsmuir, which lost to Oak Bay in last year's final, took fifth spot with a 24-0 win over Esquimalt Dockers in the consolation final. Langley finished seventh in the 14-team tourney and Cranbrook was named the most sportsmanlike team.

Five-Club Big Six May Be Big Eight

The South Island Big Six Hockey League, which started operating last season with five teams, has its sixth entry but may go to eight for the 1975-76 campaign.

London Boxing Club, formerly with the Esquimalt-based Vancouver Island League, was admitted as the sixth entry at the league's annual meeting Saturday.

The holdover clubs are Lake Cowichan, Chemainus Blues, James Bay Canadians, Ingraham Buckaroos and Stocker North Americans.

University of Victoria Vikings, another former VIHL team, had its Big Six application deferred until the squad can confirm ice arrangements with the soon-to-be-completed Oak Bay arena.

A Nanaimo group also has applied for entry into the Big Six. The application decision, however, depends on the availability of ice in the new Nanaimo rink, which may not be ready until November or December.

Bellies Trim Timbermen

NANAIMO — New Westminster Salmonbellies made it a three-way tied for first place in the Western Lacrosse Association Sunday night by thumping Nanaimo Timbermen 18-8.

Walt Yeager fired four goals and Dave Matheson, Bob D'Easum, John Hannah and Wayne Olsen counted twice for the Salmonbellies, who moved into a deadlock with the Timbermen and the undefeated Victoria Shamrocks.

DONNA WINS BY A STROKE

ATLANTA (AP) — Donna Caponi Young sank a two-foot par putt on the 18th green Sunday for a closing one-under-par 72 that gave her a one-shot victory in the $40,000 Lady Tara golf tournament.

Sandra Palmer closed with a 69, making up seven shots on the final nine holes with a sizzling 31, and finished in a two-way tie with Gloria Ehret, who finished with a 70.

Mets Best

EDMONTON (CP) — Spruce Grove Mets scored two goals during a 10-minute overtime period Saturday night and defeated Guelph Biltmore 6-4 to win the 1975 Centennial Tier Two Junior "A" hockey championship.

Paul Messier, son of the Spruce Grove coach, scored the winner on a shot that missed the net but rebounded in front and trickled past Guelph netminder Bob Mears without touching another stick.

Wayne Turner skated to the crease on a breakaway with 29 seconds remaining and Mears on the bench for an extra attacker to clinch the victory and give the Mets a 4-2 edge in the best-of-seven national final.

Keith Hertz and Ron Lecuyer, voted the outstanding players in the series, paced the Mets in regulation time by contributing to all four goals. Hertz had three goals, all set up by Lecuyer, and Lecuyer opened scoring on a clever play set up by Hertz.

Messier's goal was particularly disappointing for Guelph because the injury-riddled Biltmores appeared thoroughly beaten after Hertz scored his third goal at 5:48 of the third period.

Indians Prepare for Back-to-Reserve Trek

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

Bob Knight of Bella Coola leaned back in his frayed, leathered upholstered chair, reached into his pocket for an intricately designed craft-made wallet and started to count the bills.

"Ninety dollars," he said with some relief. "Enough to get me home on my reserve where I can help my people.

"Maybe I can get a job in the woods or fish and help those who are unemployed," he added. "Many like me will be returning to the sea or range lands."

Knight, a 30-year-old carpenter, was waiting to get a government job under a federal government summer employment program when the Union of B.C. Chiefs last Thursday urged all Indians to reject government-funded jobs and welfare cheques.

He admits he was surprised and bewildered at first but now supports the chiefs' line of action.

The UBCIC action is in protest against governments' inaction to compensate Indians for the loss of 36,000 acres of reserve land more than 50 years ago.

In the early 1920's, a federal royal commission, without obtaining the approval of Indian bands, whittled down some reserves and disposed of others on grounds they were no longer required for Indian use and occupancy.

It has resulted in deep resentment and some political observers fear if the land claims are not settled in the near future, the province may find itself faced with an "Irish problem."

Knight is one of 1,600 Indians who work and live in the Greater Victoria area. They left their reserves in various parts of the province, to find work in the city.

They are mainly from Vancouver Island west coast communities, such as Bamfield, Ahousat, Tofino, Quatsino and Hesquiat. But in the last year an increasing number of Indian families have been moving from the mainland.

Like Knight, they are faced with making a decision to return to their reserves and to reject government-funded jobs.

But a survey conducted in Victoria shows only a few have accepted the instructions of UBCIC. The majority are non-commital and are waiting to hear what their bands think of the decision.

Band meetings are being held throughout B.C. but it will take at least another week before the impact of the Indian protest is known.

Indications are the Victoria community will back leaders and an exodus of Indians from the city will start before the end of May. It is estimated that as many as 1,000 people will return to reserve lands.

But not all Indians will be able to move back to their reserves.

For example, Ethel James of Quatsino, a widow and mother of four children, has no home on her reserve to return to.

"I have lived here for 15 years," she said. "I have no other place to go."

She said she knew of at least 10 families who will remain in Victoria because of the lack of housing on reserves.

She would continue to collect welfare cheques, she added.

"The Indian chiefs left this up to us," she said. "We may either reject or accept them, depending on the circumstances. We have to use our common sense."

Did she support the action of the chiefs?

"Yes, wouldn't you if you have been robbed and cheated of your lands," she replied. "Non-Indians say this will work hardships on our people. Ah — but we are accustomed to hardships. You have kept us in poverty — ridiculed us and pushed us down."

Some mothers, like Ethel, are chiefly concerned for young people finishing school this year.

"It's not good for young men and women to be doing nothing," a middle-aged mother from Alert Bay, said. She declined to give her name.

"Jobs are scarce, but I guess we will get along," she said.

Joshua Brown of Tofino, a mechanic, said he wasn't at all pleased when he first heard that all Indians should refuse government money.

"But now I think it is a good thing," he said. "I think it is about time the government realized that we have rights in this country."

The 1,000 or more Indians living on reserves in Greater Victoria are in a different situation. The majority have homes and jobs are more readily available to them because contacts and long associations in the city.

But the no-government-funded job policy will have an impact on employment on the reserves. The administrative offices are expected to close within the next two weeks, cutting off all communications with Ottawa.

Housing construction will come to a halt, and so will archaeological digs and recreational projects.

Despite the loss of jobs, most residents appear to support their chiefs, but some, like their counterparts in the city, prefer to say nothing until the matter has been fully discussed by band councils.

"It is the best thing that has ever happened," said 65-year-old David Elliott of Tslarlip Reserve at Brentwood.

Elliott thinks most of the construction workers won't have any trouble finding employment in the city.

He observed there are not more than three persons over 65 years of age on the reserve.

"Most people on reserves today are in their twenties and thirties," he said. "The old people have gone."

People in his age group didn't have to worry too much because they were on pensions like non-Indians but some employables might have to go on welfare, he said.

"But what's wrong with that," he said. "The government isn't giving anything away. For years you and me have been paying taxes in one form and another. We are only getting our money back."

Elliott feels strongly about the land claims question.

"When this reserve was formed, each family received about two acres," he said. "Yet when one homesteader settled nearby, he was given 600 acres.

"We had land across the bay," he added. "Then suddenly in the twenties we heard that it had been sold, taken away from us. We don't forget these things."

But Edward Dick, a logger, who is in charge of building a longhouse on the Songhees Maple Bank Reserve, thinks differently.

The project is being jointly financed from federal and provincial government funds.

I think we should keep on working — at least finish this longhouse," he said.

But he said he would bow to the wishes of the band if they should decide to stop work on the project.

Why I'm Not a Judge: The Queens Who Aren't

I have written what I consider a remarkably polite "no thank you" to the latest community group offering me a spot on their panel of judges for an upcoming beauty contest, heroically overlooking the fact that, for more than 30 years, I have been going on the record in opposition to them.

It just shows you the immense power of the press that the invitation should have come, in the first place, and, in the second, that little girls are still taking off most of their clothes and parading around like blue-ribbon beef.

Now don't get me wrong. I have never believed that there's anything morally wrong with the sweet things who enter these contests. At the worst their motivation is nothing more unsavory than a childish vanity. Yet there is about them a most unladylike immodesty that, every summer, gives me a swift pain just about here.

I never see one of the interminable newspaper pictures of such flesh on the hoof that I don't wonder what kind of parent would allow a daughter to bare her pubescent pulchritude to the full public stare.

There is, of course, a token concession to the contestant's charm and talent, but it remains a match of thigh against thigh, bosom versus bosom, buttock challenging buttock and I am just old-fashioned enough to consider it degrading in any other arena than a livestock building. There are no more outspoken critics of it, in fact, than the girls of the Female Liberation movement and I am right with them on that score.

I object to these things not only because they're a method of getting cheap publicity for a multitude of enterprises, but also on purely esthetic grounds.

The firm, fresh beauty of youth is a joy to behold when it is in any sort of natural element. An attractive girl running down a beach into the surf or dressed for a party or on the tennis courts delights the eye not merely because of form, alone, but because of the grace and aliveness of her figure.

But prop the same girl on a stage with a ribbon across her chest reading, "Miss Esquimalt" or "Miss Oak Bay" and you've something that looks as if it should be in the wax museum. They stand there stolidly, awkward in high-heeled Minnie Mouse shoes, or mince about in a horrible attempt at poise while each of their parts is studied analytically. The smiles are all teeth. Only the relieved tears of victory are genuine.

This is not the contemplation of beauty, which so often shines from within, but the contemplation of sectional anatomy.

The young ladies themselves are generally an inch away from nervous hysteria and the qualities that make them so admirable in other settings — demureness, sweetness, pensiveness and the rest — are lost in what is a sort of humorless burlesque show.

If the communities must have a queen maybe it's time we stopped putting these girls into what ought to be a woman's job.

Why not, in fact, select a queen who possesses some more regal qualities than the baby-faced drum majorettes that are so often the choice?

Instead of the arbitrary standards of the tape measurement, the statistics of bust-waist-hip that have come to be the magical formula for the cheerleader type of beauty, why don't we grow up and select a queen, if we must, by some more durable tests?

We might, in fact, base the requirements on those standards of beauty outlined by Nicholas Egon, the British painter of lovely women, who spoke nothing but the truth when he observed: "Intelligent men are quickly bored by the kitten-like beauty of the young. A woman in her forties is very often more fascinating. She knows everything about herself, how to present herself, how to use her personality, how to radiate."

The quest for a queen with that quality would entail no modeling of bathing suits, but simply the quiet contemplation of a committee of intelligent men who can distinguish between the vacant-eyed pin-up cutie and the truly high-voltage woman.

If any communities would like to try for that then I wouldn't mind being a judge, at all.

WOMAN TRAPPED AFTER CRASH

A 21-year-old Surrey woman, who was trapped for more than an hour early Saturday morning in the wreckage of a car that went off an isolated part of the West Coast Road, remains in poor condition in the intensive care unit at Victoria General Hospital today.

Pamela Gerow was taken to hospital Saturday, suffering from a fractured spine.

Three other occupants of the car were treated and released from hospital, and a fourth was unhurt.

The car, driven by Egbert Engelmann, was about five miles south of Port Renfrew when it left the gravel road, went over a bridge, fell about 12 feet and flipped on its roof, Sooke RCMP said.

The other occupants were able to scramble up the embankment and flag down a passing car to get help for Gerow who was later freed by Sooke RCMP and ambulance attendants.

Radar Tower Plan Well-Received

A proposed 70-foot radar tower atop Gonzales Hill, which Oak Bay aldermen criticized last month on its visual impact, has found a better reception from design experts in the city of Victoria.

The tower, says City Hall's Advisory Design Panel, is "aesthetically pleasing" and "will not detract from the amenities of nearby established residential properties."

Planned by the federal ministry of transport as the first of four marine radar installations to monitor the movement of large vessels from Race Rocks to Vancouver harbor, the tower would be adjacent and north of the meterological station of Denison Road.

It would be sited about 100 feet into the city side of the Victoria-Oak Bay boundary. Mounted on top of the 10-foot-wide column would be a superstructure about 30 feet across and eight feet deep.

When Oak Bay council viewed the plans at its April 21 meeting Ald. Shirley Dowell commented: "It's a space needle. It's terrible," and Ald. John Goult termed the structure "the answer to Victoria's water tower." A more glowing description, however, has been submitted in correspondence to the municipalities from D. H. MacLeod, regional manager for property services for the public works ministry.

"Introduction of a radar tower at Gonzales . . . would be aesthetically pleasing," he states. "Other hills in the vicinity of Gonzales have objects such as water towers, and this architecturally designed radar tower with its clean lines should offset the water tower look and become a beautiful landmark."

Victoria's land-use planning and zoning committee, which considers the proposal at its meeting Tuesday, will be told in a report by planning director Geoff Greenhalgh that the Advisory Design Panel concurs with that view.

Man, 81, Dies In Blaze

An 81-year-old man died early this morning in a house fire at 2840 Gosworth.

Deputy R. J. Coates of the Victoria fire department said a call was received at 12:06 a.m. today.

Coates said when firemen arrived at the home, heavy smoke was pouring out from all windows and as they put ladders up the building, a rear window blew out and the room burst into flames.

Firemen entered the room and extinguished flames.

"The bed clothes, bedding and mattress were consumed by fire and there is no doubt careless use of smoking materials started the fire," Coates said.

Victoria police said the cause of death has not yet been verified, but it is believed Moore died of smoke inhalation and severe burns.

Alphonse Quits as Head Of Friendship Centre

MAN IN MOTION makes a serene silhouette as he works at the midway being erected this morning between the Memorial Arena and the Victoria Curling Rink. It was one of the last few quiet moments before the annual Junior Chamber of Commerce fair was to open at 4 p.m. The fair continues until 11 p.m. Sunday.

Cowichan Indian band chief Dennis Alphonse said today he is resigning at the end of this month as executive director of the Victoria Native Friendship Centre, 1292 Gladstone.

He said he will return to his band to devote more time to its affairs, including the possibility of establishing a food co-operative.

Alphonse has been chief of the Cowichan band for eight years and for the last three years has been with the Victoria Native Friendship Centre, an organization which helps native people adjust to urban living and provides an educational meeting place for Indian and non-Indian people to meet and get to know each other.

Another reason for resigning, he said, is because it is apparent the centre's board would not join a province-wide Indian movement to reject federal funding although the board hasn't made an official decision on this.

Indian bands and associations throughout B.C. recently decided to boycott federal funding as a means of cutting federal strings on Indian affairs.

Indians want "autonomy, self control" of their own affairs, said Chief Alphonse.

He added that no replacement for him has been made by the Victoria Native Friendship Centre but the board is due to meet later this week.

Man Shot In Home

A 51-year-old Saanich man is in good condition today in Royal Jubilee Hospital following a shooting Sunday night at his home at 3841 Epsom Drive.

Saanich police found Warren John Long in the house with a gunshot wound after a neighbor called police about 11:45 p.m. to report the shooting.

A woman has been arrested and charged with attempted murder. Her name will be released when she appears in court.

Two CUPE Locals Need More Talks

Saanich administrators and union representatives held their first meeting Friday following rejection of an area-wide settlement of the capital region's three-month civic dispute.

Employees are back at work in all areas, but in Saanich and Esquimalt where membership held out for locally-oriented adjustments, further negotiations will be arranged.

Saanich Local 374 Canadian Union of Public Employees presented an eight-point counter-proposal in which the union seeks improvement to the middle range of inside workers' salaries, based on the area-wide proposal, changes in shift differential and premium pay for dirty jobs and modification of contract language in other areas.

The union was asked to make specific recommendations on the inside salary adjustments, which will take a little time to prepare, local president Jim Brett said.

No date was set for the next meeting.

In Esquimalt it was agreed that negotiations would follow determination of an issue before the Labor Relations Board, in which the union alleges illegal lockout by the municipality.

Income Assurance Program For Greenhouse Growers

The provincial government has agreed to an income assurance program which will cover 20 greenhouse vegetable growers on the Saanich Peninsula.

The program covers retroactive to April 1, 1974. 130 provincial greenhouse growers of tomatoes, long English cucumbers and white spine cucumbers.

Ron Kavelaars, chairman of Agriculture manager, said Saturday the program will ensure virtually full payment for the first fiscal year because 95 per cent of the produce was marketed after April 1.

The federation was upset about three weeks ago during negotiations, he said, because the government seemed to be indicating it favored only half-payment for the year. But the differences were ironed out.

The plan for greenhouse growers is the fifth to be implemented in 1½ years, said Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich Other plans cover dairy, swine, field tomato and tree fruit programs.

Tony Kavelaars, chairman of the federation's greenhouse growers' committee, said rapidly rising fuel, labor and other input costs have placed greenhouse vegetable producers in serious economic distress. The new plan, he said, should permit a gradual adjustment to the emerging economic environment.

Consumers will benefit by getting local supplies of tomatoes and cucumbers, he added.

The provincial government will pay two-thirds of the premiums, while producers pay one third into a fund used to pay indemnities to participating producers when market returns fall below an established cost or production.

Production costs are calculated on the basis of a model farm which uses modern, efficient techniques to get maximum productivity.

Dear Mike:

Ever since I bought my 1972 Volvo new, I've had a problem with battery corrosion. Great frothy white crud grows on both terminals. When I mentioned this to a service station mechanic about a year ago, he said to wash the entire battery with baking soda, which I did. The crud came back within a month, and I've been repeating the baking soda treatment once a month ever since. What's the answer?

CORRODED

Dear Corroded:

Next time you clean the terminals, loosen them and slip anticorrosion felt pads underneath. These are available at any car-parts store, and they cost about $1. Also, after you re-tighten the terminals, slather them with axle grease or soft lard, then cover the lubricant with saranwrap. What causes the crud is oxygen getting to the terminal. Grease or lard will keep the oxygen at bay.

Dear Mike:

Here's a suggestion for "Botched," who got his stick-on body molding crooked. The molding usually comes in a coil roll. The trick is to uncoil the roll and leave it at room temperature for a day or two. That works out all the kinks. If you don't do it that way, it goes on wavy.

PAUL

Dear Paul:

Thanks for tip. Other readers wrote in to say the molding should be applied all in one piece, using a body ridge as a guide, and should then be cut for the doors afterward.

Dear Mike:

Is it possible for transmission fluid to be sucked into the engine oil? My filling station man says that the last time he changed the oil in my 1971 El Camino, he noticed a red cast during the draining operation, and he said the redness indicated transmission fluid.

WONDERING

Dear Wondering:

Yes, if your vacuum modulator on your transmission has a bad diaphragm, engine vacuum can draw transmission fluid into your crankcase. Have you been noticing sluggish shifting? If so, I'd say your station man is right.

Babysitters from Rent-a-Granny Agency

elizabeth forbes

Awhile back I sat in on a day-long meeting where one of the workshops debated the need for finding a project(s) for older members.

One of the suggestions was to form granny clubs in which members crowding into senior citizen years could take on the pleasant work of becoming grannies for children whose real grandparents were gone or else were too far away to act in that capacity.

Soon after, when I was looking through some Christian Science Monitors passed on to me by friends, I discovered a unique granny project going strong in Italy.

One that appears to me to have possibilities if some enterprising person wished to take it up out here.

It seems that over in Rome an enterprising countess has started a baby-sitting agency with a difference — the baby-sitters are grannies.

This "rent-a-granny" agency caters to Roman families who hesitate leaving their young in the care of teen-age girls or students.

Countess Gianna Bassi is the name of the person who dreamed up the idea and she is taking no risks about the credentials of her "girls" — out of 200 applicants she had only accepted 35 when she was interviewed.

She wanted to make quite sure, she said, that they were reliable and conscientious.

The countess, who runs an avant-garde cinema in Rome's elegant Parioli district, said she never expected so much interest in her idea.

A series of articles in the local press and appearances on radio and television gave wide publicity to the venture and said the countess, (herself a grandmother), "if all goes well — and I'm convinced it will — I hope to set up a similar agency in Milan."

The grannies are all well qualified, according to Countess Gianni.

They've all received first-class educations, they come from good families and they have good credentials.

Then she adds proudly "they are the cream of the Roman bourgeoise" — whatever that means.

Despite the qualifications these grannies possess — and they include many who speak at least three foreign languages — payment has been kept low (at least by Italian standards).

The countess' agency charges about $2.30 an hour for a granny to spend an evening minding the children.

Countess Brassi makes it clear her organization is geared to enable the grannies to use talents they were never able to use fully within their own families.

"I've got teacher-grannies, bureaucrat-grannies, linguist-grannies," she says, "and even one who is trained to look after handicapped children."

She insists that those women are tired of being confined within the four walls of home. They don't want to depend any longer on their husbands or children — they want to be independent . . . and she is giving them that chance.

Perhaps she has something there. Perhaps there is need — as it was pointed out at the day-long meeting I attended recently — for some form of organized work for grandmothers not only over in Italy but on Vancouver Island.

Perhaps the time has come for some enterprising person in this area to take up Countess Bassi's idea and make it work here.

Footnote: This month is important in Victoria, and especially so in homes that have less than their share of worldly goods, or more than their share of troubles and unhappiness. For May is the month in which the Salvation Army Red Shield Appeal goes out to you . . . and you . . . and you!

If you did not give last Monday night during the residential blitz, then be sure and do so before the end of the month.

Remember — the money you give out of your abundance will go to even up the score, smooth the sorrow, and ease the load of others who are not so fortunate.

Remember too, the words of a little verse that you'll find on the first page of the Salvation Army's 1974 report of help given the poor, the hungry, the sick and the aged.

It goes like this:

"There is a destiny that makes us brothers
None goes his way alone;
All that we send into the lives of others
Comes back into our own."

She Has Everything But Lacks Affection

DEAR ABBY—If you could see my home, car and clothes closet, you would probably think I was the luckiest woman in Boston. Well, I'm not. But I could be the most frustrated. I sometimes want affection so much I could just curl up and die.

My husband is a very successful businessman. I know he loves me, but he's not the demonstrative type. He shows our dog a lot of affection, though. Abby, you don't know how frustrating it is for me to sit there and watch my husband with the dog on his lap. He cuddles him and soratches his neck. That pup gets more loving than I do!

I just hate to be the one to always make the first move. Why are men so dumb? When we go to bed at night and he wraps those big, strong arms around me, I'm so happy, I hate to fall asleep. He's so good and dear and sweet and INSENSITIVE . . . and I'm so frustrated. What should I do? Sign me—PLENTY OF NOTHING

DEAR PLENTY—Don't sit around waiting for your hormones to dry up. MAKE your husband notice you. You may have to shove the dog off his lap, but you can make it up to him (the dog) come "BE KIND TO ANIMALS WEEK."

And what's wrong with making the first move? It's better than no moves at all. Be aggressively affectionate. Some men LIKE to be pursued. Try it, and if nothing happens, you haven't lost anything.

DEAR ABBY: My younger brother and his wife are both 23. I guess you could call them "hippies." They live in a large house in the country with a lot of other hippies.

My brother's wife is expecting her first baby in a few months, and she plans to have it at home with the others in the home "helping." Another woman who lives in the home is having a baby next month, and they expect to learn everything they need to know then.

Although both these kids are bright and not ruined by drugs, they won't listen to any "old wives' tales" or to their lab-technician brother-in-law about the danger of this. My brother's wife is Rh negative.

They say they live only 10 minutes from the hospital, and that's enough.

Can you give me some good arguments for convincing them not to go through with their plan? What do your medical advisers say? J.

DEAR J.: I agree that this young couple is foolish not to have a prenatal examination to be sure that the mother can anticipate a reasonably normal birth process.

Failure to do this could endanger the lives of both the mother and the new infant during birth. The couple is seriously underestimating the possible problems and complications that could arise if they think that watching one delivery will teach them "everything they need to know."

There is nothing wrong with wanting to have the delivery at home, but they would be well-advised to at least have an experienced midwife present to assist them.

DEAR ABBY: Can a girl get pregnant from kissing with her mouth open? WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: No. But it's a good beginning.

Too Much Water And Too Few Ideas

Cabbage as a point of interest in meals lacks glamor because of the way it has been treated — that is, with too much water and too few ideas. The best probably was the corned beef and cabbage of the 1930s. But surely we can change the generally poor image of cabbage in the modern public eye.

Just now, good head cabbages are coming on the market. They have a fair percentage of green on the outside, and are not dried out inside.

Shredded fine, mixed with an equal quantity of grated or shredded carrot, and coated with a little lemon juice and yogurt to prevent vitamin loss after cutting, you have one of the healthiest salads for late spring.

One large head will make several meals. Once it is cut, wipe over the cut surface with lemon juice, and cover closely in a dish before putting into the refrigerator. Try to use it all within three days after the head has had a portion removed.

For a lunch or light supper, a cabbage omelette is really good. Even if you don't like cabbage, try this, it has nothing of the rather bitter flavor of old cabbage boiled too long in water. No odor in the house either. It is tender and tasty.

Just for fun we'll call it Choux Omelette; choux is the word for cabbage in our second language, and omelette belongs there already.

CHOUX OMELETTE

3 cups shredded cabbage
3 tbsps of maragine or soya oil
½ cup frozen or canned green peas
3 small eggs
½ cup water
¼ cup non-instant skim milk powder
¼ tsp salt

In a frypan or skillet having a lid, heat margarine or oil. Cook the cabbage gently in the oil, covered, for eight inutes. Then add peas if frozen, and cook for 10 minutes more. If not frozen, cook the cabbage for 12 minutes, then add peas to heat thoroughly for three minutes.

Pour this mixture over cabbage and peas; allow it to

With the pan cover on, and withdraw to lowest heat to set the omelette.

With the pan cover on, the the heat of the pan, the egg mixture will be set in about eight minutes. If high heat is given, the omelette will be hard and tough (and indigestible). If no cover to your pan, try a large circle of heavy aluminum cooking foil, fitted loosely inside the pan, not outside. This can be washed with the pan, rolled and re-used.

To serve, divide the omelette in half by cutting down with a spatula, divide in half again across the other way.

Lift each portion and serve upside donw an warm plates. The omelette looks good with the green, brown, and cream coloring, and tastes just as good. two to four servings.

The next recipe is indeed a surprise. It serves cabbage as the main ingredient in an oven baked dish, again for a complete lunch or as one of several for a family supper. Once you have proved its goodness for yourself you won't hesitate about serving this dish to visitors. Any left-over portion is good cold, sliced.

Another low cost nutrition dish, this recipe is quickly put together, and takes only 30 minutes to bake. Into the same oven you can put frozen turbot fillets to cook for the next day (if you want) and a small casserole of sliced carrots to simmer with heat. Bring the carrots to boil (with little waer) on top of the stove before putting the covered dish into the oven.

CABBAGE SURPRISE

2 tbsp soya oil or soft margarine
4 cups shredded young cabbage
4 slices wholewheat bread
1 cup boiling water
¼ cup wholewheat flour
1 tbsp brewer's yeast
½ cup ground raw peanuts
¼ cup seedless raisins
1 tsp salt
2 tsp fresh lemon juice OR
1 tbsp chopped lemon balm leaves
4 small eggs, separated

Simmer cabbage gently in margarine or oil for 5 minutes, covered. Stir occasionally. Put aside to cool.

Meanwhile soak bread, with the crusts, in boiling water until softened. Drain surplus water, if any, and mash bread with a fork in a bowl.

Mix in the flour, brewer's yeast, nuts, raisins, salt, lemon juice or lemon balm leaves, andd egg yolks.

Spoon into greased casserole and bake in moderate oven at 177 degs. Celsius for about 25 minutes or until set and light brown.

This is wholly delicious in flavors, delicately blended; it is also completely nutritious and satisfying. If you are using meat at the same meal, you may omit the peanuts and half the number of eggs. But as it stands, the recipe contains a good example of protein values.

With a dish of carrots, it will make four servings.

By halving the quantities in this recipe, cabbage surprise makes a complete main course for one person.

Both of today's recipes are definitely in the low cost group and capable of being varied in details of herb seasonings and accompanying vegetables.

Stanfield Won't Quit For Now

VANCOUVER (CP) — Opposition leader Robert Stanfield said Friday he has no intention of immediately resigning the leadership of the federal Progressive Conservative Party.

Stanfield said he has no intention of following the suggestions of Burnaby—Richmond-Delta Conservative MP John Reynolds that he resign.

He said in an interview at Vancouver airport he plans to remain head of the party until the federal Conservatives hold a leadership convention next February.

Stanfield said his position is the same as he stated soon after the July 8, 1974 federal election — that he will step down as leader in early 1976.

He said he will remain as leader "as long as I have the substantial support of the Progressive Conservative caucus."

Outrage, Humor Mark Women's Rally

Showing about an equal measure of outrage and humor, a group of about 75 people marched to the legislature Saturday in a rally marking Outrage day.

The rally was organized by several Victoria area women's groups to demonstrate for equal pay, justice in matrimonial and property laws, abortion on demand and freedom for convicted and jailed abortionist Dr. Henry Morgentaler.

"But anger can incapacitate you," Anne Jardine, wearing a long black skirt and a pointed witch's hat, told the crowd from the steps of the legislature.

"These costumes some of us are wearing are to temper that anger with a little good humor — to be ia little bit outrageous."

RALLY costumes 'temper that anger.'

Federal Justice Minister Otto Lang bore the brunt of most of the humor.

"Since I'm wearing a witch's costume today I thought I'd do a couple of hexes on Otto Lang," Jardine said.

"One of them is that if there is any reincarnation, that he (Lang) should come back as a welfare mother.

"Another, and this one is more immediate, is that he should be transport minister."

Lang has voiced strong opposition to any liberalization of abortion laws in Canada.

A picket sign carried by one of the crowd read: "Otto Lang is two four-letter words."

The rally started at the law courts on Burdett where Heather Hestler, a volunteer in several women's groups, told the others at the rally that a friend of hers had told her of an appropriate quote from blues singer Billie Holiday: "You can be up to your boobs in white satin baby, and still be on the plantation."

But the outrage was there too.

"The time has come for ordinary women, women like you and me, to take our courage in hand and ... speak out," Hestler said.

"We must demonstrate our sense of outrage against injustice, discrimination and the interminable daily put-down."

Alice Ages, one of the rally organizers, said there was a purpose in the rally being started off at the law courts.

"Dr. Morgentaler defended a woman's solemn right to choose but the law says we do not have that right.

"He openly defied what we consider a bad and unjust law. It trangresses an individual's right," Ages said.

"He struggled for the right of Canadian women and as Canadian women we will fight for his freedom.

The demonstrators, mostly women and children, escorted by two policemen on motorcyles, walked from the law courts to the lawn of the legislature. Their arrival there elicited strange looks from a group of young Surrey cadets who were standing in formation in front of the buildings.

Several tourists got out their home movie camers to film the event and while the speeches were progressing, a uniformed commissionaire drove his honking yellow Volkswagen in front of the speakers.

The demonstrators were urged to write letters to governments in support of funding for a rape relief centre in Victoria. The group wants to set up a 24-hour crises line for rape victims.

Benefits from Breast Surgery

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mastectomy patients who have only a year or two to live may benefit from breast reconstruction surgery, a Montreal plastic surgeon says.

Dr. Colette Perras, here for the eighth annual meeting of the American Society for Aesthetic Plastic Surgery Inc., said the procedure won't lengthen the woman's life span, but "she may as well feel satisfied for the time she has left."

Dr. Perras said she has reconstructed breasts for 55 women who have had mastectomies during the past 12 years. The cases are closely followed up with skeletal surveys, chest X-rays and regular mammography and a study of the results will be published within a year, she said.

Formerly, reconstruction would not be attempted until about five years after mastectomy, Dr. Perras said, but a surgeons' conference two years ago concluded that even in hopeless cases it is better to help women live more happily, even if just for another year.

The operations now may be done soon after cancer tests show negative, usually about six months after the mastectomy, and recovery from the operation takes less than a month with no known negative side effects to the procedure, she said.

For women facing the prospect of mastectomy, the reconstruction means they can more easily accept the idea of going through mutilating surgery, Dr. Perras added.

Third Anik Working Well

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — The third satellite in a network to boost telephone and television service in remote northern Canadian areas has been put in place.

ANIK III was kicked into final stationary orbit by a spacecraft motor at 4:35 p.m. Saturday and space agency officials said it was operating perfectly.

Asked about the success of three satellite launchings in a row here, David Golden, president of Telesat of Canada, said: "until something better comes along, that's a pretty good average."

CYCLING

Bicycle repair shops are very busy these days. And in most cases, even the simplest repair jobs have to wait their turn.

Regardless of whether your bicycle is used for pleasure riding or basic transportation, not many of you will want to wait three or four days — and in extremely busy times — up to two weeks to have it repaired.

With this in mind, I will try, to outline some of the removal and installation procedures that you can do at home.

REPLACING PEDALS

Basic tools will be sufficient to remedy most problems, tools that most of us already have in our homes.

Pedals come in many shapes and sizes. Most bicycles have rubber and metal pedals, while some are fitted with all metal or rat-trap pedals, so-called I suppose by the jaw-like edges that grip the shoe of the rider.

Turn the bicycle upside down. If your bike is a coaster-brake type (single speed) loosen both pedals by turning the wrench towards front of the bike, letting the natural braking action hold the drive train from moving. On multi-speed machines you will have to hold the crank arm rigid during removal.

Right-hand pedals seem to wear out, literally, before the left, but here again, I would advise replacing both. Take the old pedals with you when buying new ones.

Pedals come in two sizes with either 9-16 inch or ½ inch thread. You will need a thin wrench to take them off in either case.

HANDLEBAR STEM

The stem holds the handlebars in place and serves as part of the steering mechanism. Two most common types of stems are shown. In the left illustration, note the slots cut in the power portion of the stem. As the expander bolt is tightened, a plug is drawn into the stem, forcing it open and holding it firmly against the sides of the fork stem. At right, stem and plug are bevelled and when expander bolt is tightened, it too, presses tightly against the fork stem.

Using a 9-16 inch or ½ inch wrench, loosen expander bolt three or four turns. Lay a block of wood on the bolt and hit it sharply with a hammer. This will loosen the plug and allow you to remove the old or broken stem.

If the bike is old and the stem has been in place for some time, it might be difficult to remove because of a rust buildup. Squirt a little penetrating oil around the stem and let it sit for an hour. Then, holding the front wheel of the bicycle between your knees for leverage, twist the handlebars back and forth while pulling upward until the stem comes loose.

Replace the stem by working the new one down into the forks at least three inches and tighten expander bolt until the stem is snug. Fit the handlebars back in place, make sure they are straight and finish by tightening handlebar mount and stem.

COTTER PINS

These are the wedge-like pins that hold the pedal arms to the crank axle and sometimes loosen and wear, and consequently the pedal arms slip a little while riding.

Take the chain from your bike by first locating the master link and removing it (don't look for a master link on a 10-speed bike, these chains are one piece). There are a couple of ways to force the tapered pins from the crank arm. One solution is to loosen the nut on the pin and tap it squarely with a hammer. If you are lucky, it will break free and pop out. Hitting it too hard will damage the thread on the pin.

Another method of removal might be to remove the nut from the cotter pin and, supporting the bike on a block of wood placed under the crank arm, hammer the cotter pin out with a centre punch. If you don't own a centre punch, try another block of wood between the cotter pin and the hammer.

No matter what method used, you always run the risk of bending the cotter pin or damaging the threads. However, they are a relatively inexpensive item and readily available at repair shops.

Try to remember the position they came out of the crank arm and when reinstalling make sure to keep the flat side of the cotter pin against the inside cutout section on the crank axle.

I think the only real problem you might encounter during installation is throwing the crank arms out of parallel. This happens when the cotter pins are put in from the same sides on both sides of the crank axle. Confusing eh? I'll try again. After installation, and with the crank arms parallel to the ground, you should see the top of one cotter pin on one side and the nut of the other pin on the opposite side.

Poof! Goes the Old Bent Spoon Trick

LONDON (Reuter) — Science has come up with another possible explanation of how Uri Geller bends those spoons — and it has got nothing to do with the supernatural.

The 28-year-old Israeli has long baffled audiences with his apparent ability to make a spoon bend by gently stroking it. He says a strange energy force somehow passes through him. Others say it is all sleight of hand.

But British scientists say the secret might lie in a metal they have been working with. It is an alloy that can spontaneously change shape when the temperature is raised. And it does not take much to make it work.

Fingers rubbing the metal could warm it enough, through friction, to make it start curling up, scientists say.

The metal, called Nitinol, is not new. It was developed about 10 years ago in the United States, but scientists are taking a fresh look at the alloy because, of all things, it may help alleviate the energy shortage.

A wire made of the alloy — a mix of nickel and titanium — can be twisted at high temperature, but it will always return to its normal shape when the heat cools.

But what makes Nitinol so peculiar is that it has the property of being able to return to its earlier distortions, so that when the temperature is raised it springs back to that shape.

Dr. Ken Ashbee of Bristol University, who has been working on the metal, thinks this may be Geller's secret.

"You could coat the metal with chrome so that it looked like a normal spoon," he said.

"You can set the temperature, at which it springs back, to whatever you like. You could introduce other alloys to make the movement more sluggish."

Ashbee's research is aimed at developing a simple machine to exploit the metal's properties and drive a water pump for irrigation in poor countries.

The basic idea is that Nitinol is molded into a spring-like shape, which straightens when immersed in warm water, and the effort of straightening drives the mechanism. The sun is sufficient to heat the water, providing a cheap solution for irrigating desert regions.

50 Injured, 25 Held At 'Kindness' Concert

WASHINGTON (AP) — At least 125,000 people — a happy, young crowd enjoying sunshine, soul music and each other — packed the Washington Monument grounds Saturday afternoon for a Human Kindness Day rock concert, but for the second consecutive year ugly instances of violence marred the event.

It was by far the largest throng attracted in Human Kindness Day's four-year history. The park police said "in excess of" 125,000 persons attended, and organizers of the event said there may have been as many as 200,000. People were cheek by jowl over an area of about three square city blocks around the monument.

Throughout the afternoon, but particularly late in the day, roving bands of youths swept in on individuals and beat them up or snatched purses and wallets. One park policeman told a reporter that at least 400 persons had complained of incidents, most purse-snatchings.

The rock concert started shortly after noon and continued until 7:20 p.m., when pop music superstar Stevie Wonder completed his performance. Wonder was the chief attraction and the honoree of Human Kindness Day, which is sponsored jointly by the National Park Service and Compared to What, Inc., a non-profit organization that supports the arts and various youth activities.

A park police spokesman said the Monument grounds were cleared by 8 p.m. and that, considering the huge throng that had gathered there, the event had been successful. Carl Kirkendall of Compared to What, Inc., said that although beatings and purse-snatchings were "a sadness," that "a lot of beautiful things were going on at the Monument grounds." Indeed, most trouble witnessed by reporters was on the fringes, not immediately in front of the stage.

At least 50 persons were treated for various injuries at George Washington University Hospital, officials there said. Most of the wounds were cuts caused by punches or missiles. One boy was shot in the hand and there were four drug overdoses. In the most serious case, Steven Laine, 46, of Washington, was stabbed in the right eye. He was the only one admitted to the hospital.

Park police said about 25 people had been arrested, most of them for disorderly conduct.

Most of those injured were white. The roving bands were made up, for the most part, of young black teen-agers, according to several police accounts and the observations of Washington Post reporters.

Unlike the previous three Human Kindness Days, a substantial number of whites were in Saturday's crowd, although it still was overwhelmingly black. The District of Columbia's population is about three-quarters black although the suburbs are mostly white.

Throughout the day, dozens of "crisis intervention" workers from the D.C. government were in the crowd, trying to curb robberies and assaults. The regular D.C. workers were helped out by a number of civilians, all black, breaking up groups and cooling tempers.

Park police Lt. B. W. McDonald said that from the top of the Monument grounds, "We could see them, the groups of teen-agers, go after a person, single him out and beat him . . . All we could do was go in afterwards and rescue the victim."

Wade Edwards, 18, a senior at Arundel High School in Annapolis, Md., was one of those treated at the hospital emergency room, which at times was packed. He told a reporter that eight or nine teen-aged boys walked past him, one pushed him, then "about 20 of them jumped me and kept pounding me."

Then they threw bottles at him, Edwards said. He made his way to an ambulance. Human Kindness Day, he said, "was a good idea. It was just a couple of people who got out of hand. It's nothing to blame to the whole crowd about."

Blake and talkative friend

STRAIGHT FROM HORSE'S MOUTH

LONDON (AP) — "Come on," said the horse, "where's my bloody breakfast?"

Henry Blake didn't blink an eye. Horses speak to him so clearly that he has compiled what he calls the world's first dictionary of equine language.

Horse talk, of course, comes across in signs and sounds. Blake has merely translated them into English.

"I am a true Centaur, half man, half horse," said the 49-year-old British farmer who says he has the gift of communicating with man's four-footed friends.

Blake, in fact, is a solid two-legged Englishman now living amid the mountains of Wales and devoting his whole life to studying horses.

His equine dictionary is contained in a new book, Talking with Horses, published Thursday by London's Souvenir Press.

The horse says "Hello" or "Welcome" with the same whickering, whinnying noise that can also mean "I want hay." The trick is to know the difference. "Where's my bloody breakfast?" Blake said, is shown by the whicker of welcome, a bang on the food bin or many other ways.

Stallions, say Blake, are the least interesting horses to talk to, because they have only three subjects of conversation: fear, food and females.

INDIAN WOMEN UNITE

OTTAWA (CP) — An organization "to provide a united voice for all women of North American Indian ancestry" was formed Sunday after bitter debate between native women registered under the Indian Act and those who have lost their Indian status.

The Saskatchewan Indian Women's Association, led by president Mrs. Isabel McNab, walked out of the two-day meeting saying the Indian Rights for Indian Women conference was not truly representative of Indian women and could not claim to become their spokesman.

Although Saskatchewan pulled out, two representatives from each of the other provinces and the two territories remained. Conference organizers were hopeful that native women, whether recognized or not by Ottawa as being Indians, now would work together to provide equal rights for Indian women. Many of the non-status delegates were struck off the Indian rolls kept by the Indian affairs department because they married non-status Indians.

"No wonder many of our Indian women are shacked up; they are afraid to lose their status," said another.

The new organization had its start in 1974 when the Jeanette Laval case was going through the courts.

In the final battle before the Supreme Court of Canada, the judges ruled that the Indian Act sections on status were within the powers of Parliament to enact and that they did not discriminate against Indian women.

Libbers Change School Anthem

NEW YORK — City College has curtseyed to the demands of women students who claim the words to the school anthem, Lavender, My Lavender, were sexist.

To the words praising "sturdy sons of City College," have now been added "daughters wise of City College."

The compromise was reached not without difficulty.

Dr. Alice Hamilton, a college vice-president, didn't like the first proposed amendment which lyricized of "daughters fair of City College."

This was then changed to indicate that the beauty of City College women is more than skin deep.

LOS ANGELES—Singer Gisel MacKenzie, 47, who starred on the television show "Your Hit Parade" in the 1950s, married banker Robert F. Klein on the weekend.

JACKSON, Miss. — Evangelist Billy Graham opened an eight-day crusade Sunday night before an estimated 37,000 persons at Mississippi Memorial Stadium, delivering a sermon on "The Creative, Curative and Crucified Christ."

Graham, conducting his first crusade in Mississippi since 1952, said he realized that many in the congregation were church members but he called for a re-examination of their personal relationship with Jesus Christ.

EAGLE PASS, Tex. — Justice of the Peace Thomas Herrera has decided to do his bit for the U.S. economy. He is giving $5 rebates to newlywed couples.

"Many of them thought it was a joke when I handed the $5 back to them," said Herrera, a rancher, who became justice of the peace only five months ago. "When they find out I am serious, they are tickled to death."

Herrera said he charges anywhere from $5 to $30 for his services. "And many times I don't charge at all," he added. "It all depends on the economic condition of the couple."

"It is not much," he said of the rebate. "But at least it gives them some money for gasoline."

WASHINGTON — A statue of the United States' most decorated Second World War hero, Audie Murphy, will be unveiled in San Antonio, Tex., May 17, in a ceremony marking Armed Forces Day.

Murphy, a Texan, won the Medal of Honor, Distinguished Service Cross, Silver Star, Purple Heart and more than a score of other U.S. and foreign medals and decorations.

Murphy, an actor, was killed in an airplane crash in 1971.

Miss Victoria Poll by Jaycees

Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce will conduct an informal plebiscite during the Jaycee Fair to see if Victorians want the Miss Victoria pageant resumed.

A questionnaire will be distributed at the Jaycee booth in the arena during the fair, which opens today at 4 p.m.

The pageant was cancelled this year due to adverse public reaction from women's lib spokespersons, some businessmen and because of lack of support from city council, said Jaycee fair chairman Ralph Kinnis.

"Many people misunderstand what the pageant is all about," Kinnis said.

"It is not a beauty contest. Contestants have to be intelligent, talented and have well-rounded personalities to win. A women's lib type could run and win."

He said the pageant will be resumed next year if the public response is favorable and if there is evidence of support from city council.

Kinnis said the pageant takes lot of effort but is worthwhile to the community. The 10 finalists are selected by the end of February and they undergo training sessions twice a week until fair time. Training sessions improve poise, talent and knowledge of fashions, he said.

"There is a lot more to it than just beauty."

The fair runs from 4 p.m. to 11 p.m. on opening day, today, and for the rest of the week will be open from 2 p.m. to 11 p.m. It ends Sunday night.

Jaycees expect 115,000 will attend the fair, up 15 per cent from last year.

The arena stage show at 4 p.m. and 10 p.m. daily will feature fiddler Al Cherney today, Tuesday and Wednesday and singer Tommy Common later in the week. Cherney will judge an amateur fiddling contest at 7:30 p.m. daily for the first three days.

In Kiddieland, a free puppet and magician show will be held each afternoon after school.

Midway rides in Kiddieland will be at cost at 20 cents each until Friday, when the price goes to 30 cents. All adult rides will be 60 cents, down from 75 cents last year.

Prizes in a drawing will include a trip to Disneyland and more than $1,000 in silver bullion.

Gov't St. Closed

Government Street between Fort and Humboldt will be closed to through traffic Tuesday when construction begins on the first stage of the Government Street Mall.

City traffic engineer Dave Campbell said Friday "it is hoped that traffic congestion and inconvenience can be kept to a minimum," by re-routing traffic to Wharf, Blanshard and Quadra.

Special parking and turn restrictions will be imposed on those streets.

The closed-off portion of Government will be re-opened to northbound traffic during July and August while work halts for the peak tourist season, and will then be sealed again in September until the mall is completed.

Would-Be Robber Calls for Police

A man walked into a Victoria motel Thursday and told the desk clerk he was going to hold him up, but then helped the clerk phone the police and write down his own description.

Police said desk clerk Jeffrey Gillies, 17, of 2836 Jacklin Road, was on duty at the Doric Hotel, 3025 Douglas, when a 24-year-old man walked into the lobby and stood around watching television.

After about 10 minutes, the man walked up to Gillies and told him he had better phone the police. When Gillies asked why, the man answered, "I'm going to hold you up."

Gillies told the would-be robber he should write down a description for police and the man helped him do it, supplying all the necessary information.

The last question was," Are you violent?" and the man replied that he was, and pulled a steak knife with a five-inch blade out of his back pocket.

Police said Gillies opened the phone book to find the number of the police station and the man helped him locate it, but the lobby phone was out of order so the man suggested he and Gillies should walk across the street to another motel.

Gillies asked the desk clerk at the neighboring motel to phone police and both he and the man waited until the police arrived.

Police said the man was taken to Eric Martin Institute and that he had just been released from the Jordan River detention camp where he had served 10 days for an alcohol-caused offence.

Dead Identified

NANAIMO (CP) — Gordon Cook, 71, and Clifford Wightman, 34, both of Ladysmith, were identified as the two people who died in a two-car crash on the Island Highway south of here Thursday night. Driver of the other car suffered minor injuries.

$1,800 STOLEN

Police are investigating a safecracking on Salt Spring Island in which $1,800 was stolen.

Mouat's Store at Ganges was entered after a glass door was smashed. A $30 axe was taken from the hardware department, the safe was chopped open and .22-calibre bullets were fired around the premises.

The loaded weapon was left nearby.

Colwood RCMP detachment is assisting in investigation of the theft, which is believed linked with a number of other forced entries of businesses, homes and summer cottages in recent weeks.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In this game of bridge, nobody makes winning decisions all the time, not even the world's best players. As an example, observe today's deal, which was played in the 1975 World Championships, in the match between the United States and Italy. In this deal, a losing decision was made by one of the world's leading players, Benito Garozzo, of the victorious Italian team. He was sitting in the West seat.

East-West vulnerable. North deals.

NORTH
♠ Q83
♥ 75
♦ AK62
♣ J853

WEST: ♠ 972 ♥ AKJ9432 ♦ 109 ♣ K

SOUTH
♠ AK10654
♦ 73
♣ AQ742

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	3 ♥
3 ♦	4 ♥	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	5 ♥	5 ♠	Dbl.
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♥.

After ruffing the opening heart lead, South, Robert Hamman, of the United States, cashed the ace, king, and queen of spades, in that order, picking up the four outstanding trumps. He then led the jack of clubs, and took the finesse, losing to West's singleton king. As is evident, the rest of the tricks belonged to declarer. So South fulfilled his doubled contract with an overtrick — and Garozzo's double turned out to be a costly losing decision.

However, as is often the case with winners, Garozzo's team gained a victory on the deal, for when it was, replayed, Garozzo's teammates, Vito Pittala and Arturo Franco, sitting North and South respectively, arrived at a six-spade contract. Pittala also lost a trick to West's king of clubs, but since he had bid the slam, the Italian team gained six International Match Points on the deal.

The reader may wonder why each of the declarers led the jack of clubs instead of leading a low club off dummy and finessing the queen. Taking it from Pittala's point of view (!in a small slam contract), his only worry was that East might possess the four outstanding clubs. If such were the case, then East would cover the jack with the king, South's ace winning.

East would now have (in theory) the tripleton 10-9-6 remaining, while South would have the Q-7-4-2. By getting to dummy and leading a low club next, East would have to put up the nine, forcing South's queen. Declarer would now lose only one trump trick, since he would have the seven and eight remaining against East's doubleton 10-6.

As to why Hamman, at five spades, doubled, led the jack of clubs, he was perfectly happy to be certain of making one overtrick instead of trying for two and making none.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR

Forecast for Tuesday, May 13

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Steer clear of any tendency to disregard safety rules, regulations. Be wary around persons who lash out first and apologize later. Be ready to investigate information. Take nothing for granted. Relatives are in mood to challenge for sake of argument.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Protect assets. Someone apparently expects something for nothing — at your expense. Know it and be prepared in clinches. Home decorations, improvements are now emphasized. Give special attention to family member. Another Taurus — and a Libran — figure prominently.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Friend makes waves — and you may be questioned by one in authority. See situation as it really is, not as it might be. Pisces, Virgo figure in picture. Accent is on direct action which catches some people off guard. You'll comprehend!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Much of what happens is result of recent meeting which divulged confidential material. Key now is acceptance of responsibility. Applies to personal as well as professional relationships. Older individual will share experience if you are receptive.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You finish, spread influence, improve distribution. Aries, Libra persons figure prominently. Accent is on friend who argues about money with mate, partner — and confides in you. Maintain neutral stance or you'll become inextricably involved.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Fresh start gives your proverbial "second chance." Make most of it by being creative, independent, inventive. Refuse to settle for substitutes. Insist on quality, first-rate goods. Leo, Aquarius are in picture.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Low-key approach serves your best purposes. If you share interests, knowledge, allies come to your side. If haughty, insistent or cold — you meet more opposition than is healthy. Aquarian has plenty to say. Listen!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Study Libra message for valid hint. Accent is on spending, extravagance, love and special relationships with children. Highlight flexibility. Accept social invitation. You're going to meet someone who is "smashing."

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Modernize concepts. Don't feel boxed in by past, by what others think you should do. Lie low in sense that you do plenty of listening, observing. One close to you takes initiative. So be it and let it be so. Your turn comes later!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be ready for change of scenery. Be prepared to deal with bright, sprightly, alert people. Gemini, Sagittarius and Virgo could play significant roles. Accent is on basic procedures, settling of conflicts which involve neighbors, relatives.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): What you cast upon the seas comes back — and you learn the significance of this — sooner than originally anticipated. Family, home and security are directly involved, as are Libra, Taurus persons.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You get action in areas previously moribund. Money is involved. You are asked to pick and choose. Price is an issue — and so is quality. Another Pisces is to play paramount role. Virgo also is in picture. You get a different kind of "appraisal."

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you will soon break free of emotional rut. You are used to bucking odds, being at odds with authorities, being somewhat of a rebel. If single, marriage is on horizon. If married, change, travel and an addition to family are indicated. Aquarius, Leo and Scorpio persons play important roles in your life.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"Twenty-nine of those dresses left, eh," said Sarah. "Sizes 12, 14, 16 and 18. How many of each?"

Ben shook his head. "I forget, but I remember they were all different numbers, with four times as many fourteens as eighteens and three more sixteens than twelves."

You figure it out.

Rhododendrons Delight Owners

Rhododendron flowers opening in April and May delight new owners who bought the plants only last year. There may be the feeling that rhodos are easy in spite of the columns of advice given in good gardening books and elsewhere.

This is all very natural. Most rhododendrons raised by local growers are propagated by cuttings from named varieties. Usually the young plants are grown for two to three years with some shelter until the last year when they go to lath houses for hardening off and developing flower buds.

Since buds can be seen by late summer in most varieties, the rhodo grower begins selling the stock in fall, confidently telling the customer that the plants will flower in spring. And apart from a prolonged killing winter cold spell, there are no disappointments.

From now on it depends on you, the new owners of these rhodos which have already bloomed, as to whether those same plants bloom again next spring.

The plants have been making a lot of new roots this spring and will be able to produce abundant new growths during early summer which should result in bud formation by late summer and early fall.

In a few instances, rhododendrons find it necessary to spend their first year energy on adjusting to the new soil, making new roots, new green growth but no flower buds.

Don't worry if this happens in your garden. If there is sufficient sunshine reaching the plants to ripen the growths in summer for buds to form, all will be well in following years.

Dappled shade is wanted by most varieties to prevent scorching of leaves, plus soil moisture and air humidity.

Of the thousands of species and named hybrids of rhododendrons known and grown, some are more difficult than others, but they are not found in the average plant displays although they can be seen in specialists' nurseries and gardens.

Care for newly planted, or last year's, rhodos consists first of supplying water to the roots. This year, it was early April that they needed both root watering and air humidity. Ever since, it has been necessary on a constant basis to mist spray with water all broadleaved evergreens of which rhodo is one member.

All these shrubs loose a great deal of moisture from leaves into dry air and must have it constantly replaced, or the air around them kept humid artificially to prevent what amounts to dehydration.

Also now as blossoms fade, each flower stem with its seed pod should be nipped off to prevent seed formation. On young plants having perhaps three flower heads of about 15 flowers each, it is no great task to go over the heads every other day; Don't wait until the end of the flowering season when seed pods will be swelled.

Even now you can see the fat scaly new growth buds at the base of this year's flower head. They are for next year.

When removing the flower stems be careful not to damage these scaly buds. The branches are not pruned back as are other spring-flowering shrubs.

It is now up to the new owners of these lovely plants to carry on the good work put into them by the professional propagator during the years of pre-sale care.

HOW TO WRITE

A GOOD

CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.
Don't allow the reader to speculate.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily. Monday through Saturday call:

Recycling Depot Open

The recycling depot on Borden at McKenzie is back on regular hours and receiving a steady supply of bottles and cans, spokesman David Jackman said today.

The expected deluge of people unloading their three-month collection or recyclable materials didn't materialize Saturday, he said, but business was steady all day.

No newspapers are being accepted because the depot already has a backlog of 100 tons of old newspapers, and Jackman said it will probably be a month before more can be accepted.

'Special Problems' For Public Employees

VANCOUVER (CP) — Public employees are different from employees of private companies and should be represented only by public sector unions, an official of the British Columbia Government Employees' Union says.

Cliff Andstein, a union research officer, told about 60 delegates to the Pacific North-West Labor Conference that public employees face special problems that their unions must handle.

Andstein said if the employees make demands which their employers consider unreasonable they may be faced with changes in labor legislation to force them back to work or to accept compulsory arbitration.

"We're bargaining with employers who make the rules," said Andstein. "If they don't like it they'll change the rules."

The BCGEU spokesman said public employees differ in that their wages come from taxes, not company earnings. He said public sector unions find it difficult to ask for substantial wage increases because they know the money must come from taxes paid by fellow workers.

"There is a problem in going to other unions to ask for support," he said. "They'll just say 'Why? My taxes will go up'."

Andstein said public employees rarely get the support of the public in their wage demands and are aware they can strike only on that basis.

He said public employees find justifiable wage increases difficult to determine since demands can be based on increases in the gross national product, the cost of living and wages made by comparable workers but not company profits.

Public employees also suffer from constant changes in government policy which may shift them from one area to another or change their jobs, said Andstein.

He said the employees accept this because some institutions inevitably disappear and "services change as society and government changes."

Andstein said it is more difficult to persuade the public that public employees really do provide valuable services since their productivity cannot easily be measured in service work.

The BCGEU's two-tier bargaining system provides for one master agreement for all 35,000 employees and 13 sub-agreements with special clauses for certain groups.

Andstein said the current NDP government gave the BCGEU collective bargaining rights and official recognition. He said under the former Social Credit government the union was forced to strike illegally and gain its demands by "collective begging."

$59,000 BILLS JUST .001%—MD

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Dr. William Jory, chairman of the British Columbia Medical Association annual convention, said Saturday over-billing by B.C. doctors in the last three years has only amounted to one cent in extra bills for every $1,000 billed.

"Since the annual expenditure for medical services commission payments is approximately $170 million a year, a little arithmetic will show you that the figure of $59,000 extra bills, as stated to us by the commission, over three years represents .001 per cent of the total," said Dr. Jory.

Communications Snagged?

OTTAWA (CP) — The provinces and Ottawa appear at loggerheads prior to the second federal-provincial conference on communications in Ottawa Tuesday.

Gerard Pelletier, federal communications minister, said Sunday he has received and studied joint proposals backed by several provinces.

A common front appears to be taking shape with the provinces pressing for greater control over the issuing of permits and content of radio and television, especially cable television.

The provinces do not want control over the designation of broadcast frequencies, which would remain in a federal domain. But they do want control over telecommunications companies with installations within provincial boundaries.

Pelletier hesitated before consenting to this second communications conference, to examine the relative federal and provincial responsibilites, eighteen months after the first.

He said he thought the provinces, especially Quebec, wanted to negotiate constitutional problems which he feels should be discussed at a premiers' conference.

Deaf Can Phone On $100 Machine

HAMMOND, Ind. (UPI) — A device which operates like a push-button telephone and costs less than $100 can allow deaf mutes to communicate by telephone.

Andrew Kovach, an electrician used his spare time and surplus equipment to put together the device, which allows messages to be punched out on touch-tone phones with the message arriving, letter by letter, by flashing on a screen attached to the phone.

He's offering the blueprints for free.

"It's simple," Kovach said, showing off the shoe box-sized screen which took him a year's worth of spare time to perfect. "It works just like a touch-tone telephone."

The screen is attached by electrical cord and suction cup to a telephone receiver. The cord picks up the total frequency in the receiver and transmits to the equipment. The equipment in turn picks up the frequency, causing letters to flash one at a time on the small screen.

The person receiving the message only has to learn the simple code.

While slower than the teletype equipment available for deaf mutes through the telephone company, Kovach says his system has advantages which make it more useful.

"Electype machines that are purchased from the telephone company cost between $700 and $800," he said. "But these are big, bulky machines and you need both a transmitter and a receiver to use them."

Restraint Plan Called 'Sham That's in Shambles'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Federal Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield told a party group Saturday cohesiveness within the party is essential as Conservatives head to a leadership convention.

"No one understands the need for cohesiveness better than the Progressive Conservative party in the province of British Columbia," he said to applause from about 60 persons at a fund-raising seminar.

Stanfield reiterated his stand that he won't step down before he's ready, probably at the leadership convention expected next February.

Stanfield told his audience the party must be cohesive for it to be taken seriously after its unexpectedly low showing at the polls last July.

Reynolds was the only Vancouver-area Conservative MP who did not attend the luncheon meeting.

Stanfield said Finance Minister John Turner's "consensus" plan for business and labor to hold down prices and wages is a "sham that's in a shambles."

He called the policy a "sick exercise to grab time" and said it "suckered a lot of Canadians very successfully during the 1974 election campaign and they (the Liberals) seem to be still at it."

Turner, he said, "fled from his responsibilities" and there is a wide-spread feeling he simply passed the buck to business and labor who refused to be put is such a situation.

Church Panel To Try Rector

AKRON, Ohio (AP)—Rev. Peter Beebe, an Episcopal Anglican rector accused of violationg church rules by permitting women to celebrate communion, goes on trial before a panel of five priests here Tuesday.

The trial was moved to St. Paul's Episcopal Church here from smaller quarters in Sandusky because of wide public and media interest.

The 29-year-old priest, who invited two irregularly ordained women priests to celebrate communion last December, is charged with violating his ordination vows, the church's constitution and canons and the rubrics of the Book of Common Prayer.

In Washington, D.C., two weeks ago, Rev. William Wendt was tried for permitting women to celebrate communion. No verdict has been announced.

Beebe allowed Rev. Alison Cheek of Annandale, Va., and Rev. Carter Heyward of New York City to celebrate communion at Christ Church in nearby Oberlin despite a request from his bishop that the service not be held.

The Episcopal church has ruled the ordination of 11 women in Philadelphia last summer invalid because church law does not provide for women at that level of the ministry.

Writing on the Wall Says No Smoking

The Canadian Press

In restaurants and department stores, trains and buses, Canadians are learning to check for no-smoking signs before lighting up.

Responding to complaints from non-smokers, an increasing number of public places have set up areas where smoking is forbidden or banned it altogether.

A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press shows as much as 50 per cent of passenger space on many buses, trains and airplanes is reserved for non-smokers. Many hospitals, theatres and sports arenas limit smoking to a few designated areas and most large department stores have prohibited it.

Ken Eldridge said he stopped selling tobacco at his two drug stores in Vancouver this year because he "felt it was not good business or consistent for a drug store to be selling vitamins and health products on one shelf and tobacco on another."

Peter Vassil, a Toronto restaurant and tavern owner, decided to set up a non-smoking section after his restaurant was filled with customers when he prohibited smoking one night at the suggestion of the Non-Smokers' Rights Association.

W. Farrell Goudet, vice-president of marketing for Eastern Provincial Airways, said that "in the last six months to a year I've noticed quite an increase — probably 100 per cent — in complaints from passengers about smoking."

Five rows in each plane are reserved for non-smokers and the company is considering an explanation, he said.

A spokesman for Air Canada said it recently increased the non-smoking section on its planes to 50 per cent from 30 per cent of passenger space after a survey of customers showed an "overwhelming" number objected to smoking.

A CP spokesman said sometimes up to 50 per cent of seats on its planes are reserved for non-smokers.

Smoking is forbidden in Canadian National Railways commuter trains in Montreal and in almost half the seats of GO transit trains in the Toronto area.

Only cigarettes may be smoked on many inter-city buses and smoking is prohibited on most city buses across the country. Some schools forbid smoking and others have designated smoking areas.

No cigarettes are sold in vending machines and stores in some hospitals. The staff of the Winnipeg Health Sciences Centre and St. Boniface General Hospital are not allowed to leave the hospitals during working hours to buy cigarettes.

Edmonton is among municipalities where council recently has prohibited smoking in its chambers. Ald. Ron Hayter also opposes smoking in retail stores.

He said he complained to a woman in a store who was dropping cigarette ashes into lettuce because "as a non-smoker I have rights, and I don't intend minding my own business when someone is dropping ashes among the lettuce that I may be eating."

Meanwhile, some persons say smokers' right are being violated. When Lethbridge, Alta., city council recently banned smoking at council meetings, Ald. Bill Kertan said the resolution contravened the province's Human Rights Act.

Some municipal bylaws provide fines for smoking where prohibited.

Not all smoking bans are easy to enforce. Spokesmen in most police departments across the country said they did not remember any minors being charged for having cigarettes.

Manitoba — Cigarette machines are banned in hospitals, theatres and most schools. Fire marshal's regulations prohibit smoking in ice arenas, except in the lobbies, and theatres. Most Winnipeg hospitals forbid smoking except in designated areas such as washrooms, lounges and some sections of cafeterias.

Saskatchewan — Fire regulations prohibit smoking in some areas of theatres. Smoking is banned on city buses and only cigarettes may be smoked on inter-city busses, which usually have a section for non-smokers.

Alberta — Edmonton General Hospital forbids sale of tobacco products in the hospital. A 1974 report by the Alberta Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association said a significant number of 100 hospitals surveyed provided no protection for non-smoking respiratory patients or patients in general. Spokesmen for three Edmonton hospitals said they discourage smoking in the hospital or limit it to specified areas.

British Columbia — In Vancouver, smoking is prohibited in theatres, some assembly halls and department stores with more than 25 employees. The fire department said women have complained their clothes have been signed in department stores.

FEW OBJECTIONS

In downtown Victoria, several larger stores including The Bay, Eaton's and Marks and Spencer have prohibited smoking on the premises since early last winter — apparently without much public objection.

The city has no general ban applicable to all business establishments, but those merchants who wish to clamp down on smoking can seek the necessary authority from Fire Chief Eric Simmons.

The appropriate section of the fire prevention bylaw authorizes his department to prohibit smoking in any theatre, store or public place were combustible materials are "handled, stored, manufactured or sold." Offenders are liable to prosection and a maximum $100 fine.

End Close in Laos As Military Yields

FIRE AND FLOOD GREET FIREMEN

OTTAWA (CP) — Where there's smoke there's water?

Usually only after firemen arrive.

But when Diane Dunham's water-bed caught fire early today it flooded an apartment below and alerted neighbors. They arrived in time to revive an unconscious Miss Dunham and take her to Ottawa General Hospital, where later she was said to be in satisfactory condition.

The fire apparently started when a cigarette was dropped into the bed covers.

IT'S ENOUGH to make the dowager Empress Hotel shift her foundations to have her velvety lawns bruised by the crack of a croquet mallet. But these and stranger scenes will take place as Victorian Days draw closer. Vicki Neligan, seen taking a swing, and Howard Mitchell, behind her, are co-chairmen for the fifth annual Cotillion Ball, which takes place at the University of Victoria's Craigdarroch Hall on Friday. Watching the chairmen get in a little pre-ball exercise are, left to right, Karel de Roo, Holly Mitchell, Laurie Mitchell, Colette Wilkins, Dorothy Eng and Pat Mitchell. See page 9 for other Victoria Days events. (D and D photo)

VIENTIANE, Laos (UPI) — The Communist Pathet Lao today asserted control of the loyalist (non-Communist) military forces in Laos and the right-wing army commander quickly fell in line with its dictates.

The Pathet Lao already had seized control of the cabinet, forcing the resignation of rightist members. Prince Souvanna Phouma, the neutralist premier, went on the radio to try to stem panic and public fears about the deteriorating situation.

Kham Quane Boupha, the new Pathet Lao defence minister, issued a communique demanding that "all officers and men should be prepared to follow my orders."

After the communique was broadcast on national radio the army commander, Lt.-Gen. Bounpone Makphepharak, ordered that Kham Quane's directives be followed and said any soldier not present for duty today would be considered a deserter.

Vietnamese, Indian and Chinese, fearful of a Communist takeover of the last non-Communist nation in Indochina, were fleeing the country in large numbers, severely disrupting its economy since they control most business here.

Meanwhile in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, officials of five non-Communist nations are drafting a blueprint for a neutral peace zone in Southeast Asia eliminating defence pacts with foreign powers.

The foreign ministers of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations were expected to vote on the plan this week at a three-day meeting in the Malaysian capital.

In Washington, a state department spokesman said there were no plans to evacuate the 1,000 Americans now in Laos.

The Communist move to take over the military came from Kham Quane Boupha, the new Pathet Lao defence minister. He issued a communique over national radio which forbade movements of loyalist troops or war equipment without defence ministry orders and warned of punitive action against any units that did not obey.

The communique also demanded military units declare their loyalty to the coalition government and the national political consultative council controlled by the Pathet Lao. The government's principal artillery, armor and logistic units immediately disavowed their ties with right-wing elements.

The announcement found loyalists in disarray with four rightist cabinet ministers who resigned over the weekend fled from the country and a growing number of military units disavowing the leadership of rightist generals. A fifth right-wing cabinet minister in Europe was not expected to return.

The Pathet Lao also accused Thailand of supporting a coup to overthrow the leftists in the coalition government but the statement brought a quick denial from the Thai government. Thai Prime Minister Kukrit Pramoj described as a fabrication reports Thailand had sent gunboats and artillery up the Mekong River to support such a coup.

Souvanna's brief radio message did not mention the political upheaval directly, nor did it give any indication of how he expected it would be re-

WALKOUTS SPREAD

Times News Services

MONTREAL — Wildcat walkouts halted work for a fifth day today at major Montreal construction sites, including the 1976 Olympic stadium facilities where city officials warned the threat to progress was becoming "very critical."

The Construction Association of Montreal and Quebec said the stoppages had spread to more than the 17 sites hit Friday and "we have no idea at all when they'll be back."

"The Olympic sites are still down," association general manager Robert Nuth said. "We haven't completed the count of how many projects are effected but it looks as if it'll top 25, at least."

Montreal executive committee chairman Lawrence Hanigan warned Sunday that every day lost through stoppages could affect the planned May 1976 opening of the $380 million stadium, centrepiece of next year's summer Olympic Games.

However, the organizing committee of the Olympics tried to reassure the public today that the Games will not be delayed by the work stoppage.

B.C. Indian Militancy Not Surprising—Paul

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

If British Columbia Indians are becoming militant and radical, no white man in this society should be surprised, says Indian leader Philip Paul.

The new mood is a direct result of "the poverty, the emptiness, the bitterness" he has seen in travels around the province, Paul said in an interview with the Times.

"It's a phenomenon that's happening," he said.

Militancy is not part of the culture of B.C. Indians, Paul said, but poverty, the breakdown of traditional family structures, alcoholism and years of frustration are changing that.

Paul predicts a hot summer, with a continuation of the demonstrations and occupations of Indian affairs department offices already occurring in the interior.

He thinks Indians will start exercising their aboriginal rights to fish and hunt out of season and off the reserves, in defiance of the law.

"They (the public) are going to blame us (Indian leaders) for all the kinds of havoc that will happen," he said.

But this new militancy, which led Indian chiefs last month at Chilliwack to reject all further government funds, is a real movement among Indian people, not something created by a few radical leaders, he said.

"People who think we have to organize this are asleep," he said.

"We had control of the situation at one point ... but after the kind of things that have been happening, it's out of our hands now."

Occupation Ends

VANCOUVER (CP) — Members of the American Indian Movement who occupied the regional offices of the federal Indian affairs department Friday, had vanished today.

A spokesman for the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs said the AIM occupiers had arranged to hold a press conference at the union's offices today, presumably to announce further strategy.

Larry Wight, regional director of the department, had met with representatives of the attorney-general's department and police during the weekend in an attempt to get the occupiers out of the offices.

But he said when he came to work this morning that no conclusions had been reached, and it was a surprise to him that the occupation had ended.

Clerks and stenographers were ordered home by departmental supervisors when the occupation began at 2 p.m. Friday.

During the weekend, shifts of between 15 and 30 Indians — men, women and children — sat in at the offices.

There was no violence during the takeover, although some war whoops were heard and the office echoed to the sound of tape-recorded Indian songs.

Canadian Firm Proposes Anacortes Tanker Terminal

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Trans Mountain Pipe Line Co. Ltd. of Vancouver has proposed building a deep-water oil supertanker terminal near Anacortes, Washington State, to protect its $6 million investment in pipelines in that area.

The proposal is one of three being considered by the Washington legislature's transportation committee.

The committee is continuing hearings on whether to let individual oil companies expand their own terminals for supertankers, approve the Trans Mountain proposal or construct a supertanker terminal just west of Port Angeles.

The committee has indicated interest in the Port Angeles proposal but this was before the Trans Mountain plan was made public.

Kenneth Hall, a Trans Mountain vice president, said today the immediate interest of the company in proposing to construct a $44.1 million terminal at Anacortes was to protect its investment in Washington State.

The company brings crude oil from Alberta to Vancouver and some is diverted south to Washington refineries. About 58 per cent of the crude oil goes south of the border. However, the Canadian government has told U.S. refineries this export would eventually be phased out.

Hall said a supertanker terminal at Anacortes would enable Trans Mountain to pump Alaska oil through its existing pipelines to nearby refineries.

He said the exact site of the terminal would be Burrows Bay where there is 120 feet of water, large enough to accommodate supertankers in the range of 325,000 deadweight tons, about twice the size of supertankers that would enter the area if each oil company operated independently.

However, there would be fewer tankers required.

From Burrows Bay, Trans Mountain would construct 7,000 feet of underwater pipeline and seven more miles of pipeline across Fidalgo Island. It would then join up with existing Trans Mountain pipeline at Anacortes.

Members of the Washington State transportation committee indicated that the Trans Mountain proposal might be superior to the plan by oil companies to go it alone. Mobil and Shell have applied for permission to expand their tanker terminals. Arco has

By Reuter

Israeli troops kidnapped five Lebanese in dawn raids on three viallages in wouthern Lebanon today, official sources in Beirut said. They said that those kidnapped included a woman and a doctor.

The sources said an Israeli force infiltrated into the eastern area of Bint Jbeil, blew up a coffee shop and kidnapped its owner after searching his house.

They also kidnapped Dr. Ahmed Nurad, a local doctor who happened to be dfriving in the area at the time of the incident.

The sources said another Israeli force kidnapped the woman in a village. Two other persons were taken from another village.

The official in Binh Jbail said the Israeli force numbered about 100 men. He said four other Lebanese were taken from the villages of Ait el-Shaab and Ait Around after a house-to-house search.

'Looking At' Oil Royalties

Times News Services

NEW YORK — Premier David Barrett said here the B.C. government is "looking at" its oil royalty rates in response to complaints that they are so high no will develop new wells in the province.

"I don't agree it is uneconomic, but I agree it is more severe than roayties in other areas," Barrett said in an interview.

"We are looking at it."

Barrett also slightly modified his previous flat statement that there was "no way" oil from Alaska would be used in a new B.C. refinery the government is promoting.

"We would not take Alaska oil shipped by tanker," he said. But, he claimed, his idea of a railway route for Alaska oil, known as "the way out," "is not to be discarded."

While oil tanker shipments through the Strait of Juan de Fuca are "totally unacceptable," he maintained that there is still U.S. interest in his railway plan.

Barrett also said that Canada should be moving in the direction of public ownership and control of all her natural gas and oil.

"I think the first step would be a marketing board such as we have in British Columbia," the premier said.

"That has given us control of the marketing process which is an entree for public ownership from there. But you don't have to go into the immediate public ownership as long as the public has some say and some control in regulating.

"That's the best first step to develop some confidence in Canada about the use of our own resources by Canadians."

In a speech honoring Bernard Ricklin, a militant trade unionist, Barrett said that taxing the rich to the hilt is the proper thing to do because they can afford it.

He offered encouragement to U.S. socialists, now in the doldrums over party factionalism by giving a brief rundown on the nuts-and-bolts operation of his NDP government.

"We tax the rich, and we tax them heavily," Barrett told 250 socialists.

Indians Prepare for Back-to-Reserve Trek

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

Bob Knight of Bella Coola leaned back in his frayed, leathered upholstered chair, reached into his pocket for an intricately designed craft-made wallet and started to count the bills.

"Ninety dollars," he said with some relief. "Enough to get me home on my reserve where I can help my people.

"Maybe I can get a job in the woods or fish and help those who are unemployed," he added. "Many like me will be returning to the sea or range lands."

Knight, a 30-year-old carpenter, was waiting to get a government job under a federal government summer employment program when the Union of B.C. Chiefs last Thursday urged all Indians to reject government-funded jobs and welfare cheques.

He admits he was surprised and bewildered at first but now supports the chiefs' line of action.

The UBCIC action is in protest against governments' inaction to compensate Indians for the loss of 36,000 acres of reserve land more than 50 years ago.

In the early 1920's, a federal royal commission, without obtaining the approval of Indian bands, whittled down some reserves and disposed of others on grounds they were no longer required for Indian use and occupancy.

It has resulted in deep resentment and some political observers fear if the land claims are not settled in the near future, the province may find itself faced with an "Irish problem."

They are mainly from Vancouver Island west coast communities, such as Bamfield, Ahousat, Tofino, Quatsino and Hesquiat. But in the last year an increasing number of Indian families have been moving from the mainland.

Like Knight, they are faced with making a decision to return to their reserves and to reject government-funded jobs.

But a survey conducted in Victoria shows only a few have accepted the instructions of UBCIC. The majority are non-commital and are waiting to hear what their bands think of the decision.

Band meetings are being held throughout B.C. but it will take at least another week before the impact of the Indian protest is known.

Indications are the Victoria community will back leaders and an exodus of Indians from the city will start before the end of May. It is estimated that as many as 1,000 people will return to reserve lands.

But not all Indians will be able to move back to their reserves.

For example, Ethel James of Quatsino, a widow and mother of four children, has no home on her reserve to return to.

"I have lived here for 15 years," she said. "I have no other place to go."

She said she knew of at least 10 families who will remain in Victoria because of the lack of housing on reserves.

She would continue to collect welfare cheques, she added.

"The Indian chiefs left this up to us," she said. "We may either reject or accept them, depending on the circumstances. We have to use our common sense."

Did she support the action of the chiefs?

"Yes, wouldn't you if you have been robbed and cheated of your lands, she replied. "Non-Indians say this will work hardships on our people. Ah — but we are accustomed to hardships. You have kept us in poverty —ridiculed us and pushed us down."

Some mothers, like Ethel, are chiefly concerned for young people finishing school this year.

"It's not good for young men and women to be doing nothing," a middle-aged mother from Alert Bay, said. She declined to give her name.

"Jobs are scarce, but I guess we will get along," she said.

Joshua Brown of Tofino, a mechanic, said he wasn't at all pleased when he first heard that all Indians should refuse government money.

"But now I think it is a good thing," he said. "I think it is about time the government realized that we have rights in this country."

The 1,000 or more Indians living on reserves in Greater Victoria are in a different situation. The majority have homes and jobs are more readily available to them because contacts and long associations in the city.

But the no-government-funded job policy will have an impact on employment on the reserves. The administrative offices are expected to close within the next two weeks, cutting off all communications with Ottawa.

Housing construction will come to a halt, and so will archaeological digs and recreational projects.

Despite the loss of jobs, most residents appear to support their chiefs, but some, like their counterparts in the city, prefer to say nothing until the matter has been fully discussed by band councils.

"It is the best thing that has ever happened," said 65-year-old David Elliott of Tslarlip Reserve at Brentwood.

Elliott thinks most of the construction workers won't have any trouble finding employment in the city.

He observed there are not more than three persons over 65 years of age on the reserve.

"Most people on reserves today are in their twenties and thirties," he said. "The old people have gone."

People in his age group didn't have to worry too much because they were on pensions like non-Indians but some employables might have to go on welfare, he said.

"But what's wrong with that," he said. "The government isn't giving anything away. For years you and me have been paying taxes in one form and another. We are only getting our money back."

Elliott feels strongly about the land claims question.

"When this reserve was formed, each family received about two acres," he said. "Yet when one homesteader settled nearby, he was given 600 acres.

"We had land across the bay," he added. "Then suddenly in the twenties we heard that it had been sold, taken away from us. We don't forget these things."

But Edward Dick, a logger, who is in charge of building a longhouse on the Songhees Maple Bank Reserve, thinks differently.

The project is being jointly financed from federal and provincial government funds.

I think we should keep on working — at least finish this longhouse," he said.

But he said he would bow to the wishes of the band if they should decide to stop work on the project.

Why I'm Not a Judge: The Queens Who Aren't

I have written what I consider a remarkably polite "no thank you" to the latest community group offering me a spot on their panel of judges for an upcoming beauty contest, heroically overlooking the fact that, for more than 30 years, I have been going on the record in opposition to them.

It just shows you the immense power of the press that the invitation should have come, in the first place, and, in the second, that little girls are still taking off most of their clothes and parading around like blue-ribbon beef.

Now don't get me wrong. I have never believed that there's anything morally wrong with the sweet things who enter these contests. At the worst their motivation is nothing more unsavory than a childish vanity. Yet there is about them a most unladylike immodesty that, every summer, gives me a swift pain just about here.

I never see one of the interminable newspaper pictures of such flesh on the hoof that I don't wonder what kind of parent would allow a daughter to bare her pubescent pulchritude to the full public stare.

There is, of course, a token concession to the contestant's charm and talent, but it remains a match of thigh against thigh, bosom versus bosom, buttock challenging buttock and I am just old-fashioned enough to consider it degrading in any other arena than a livestock building. There are no more outspoken critics of it, in fact, than the girls of the Female Liberation movement and I am right with them on that score.

I object to these things not only because they're a method of getting cheap publicity for a multitude of enterprises, but also on purely esthetic grounds.

The firm, fresh beauty of youth is a joy to behold when it is in any sort of natural element. An attractive girl running down a beach into the surf or dressed for a party or on the tennis courts delights the eye not merely because of form, alone, but because of the grace and aliveness of her figure.

But prop the same girl on a stage with a ribbon across her chest reading, "Miss Esquimalt" or "Miss Oak Bay" and you've something that looks as if it should be in the wax museum. They stand there stolidly, awkward in high-heeled Minnie Mouse shoes, or mince about in a horrible attempt at poise while each of their parts is studied analytically. The smiles are all teeth. Only the relieved tears of victory are genuine.

This is not the contemplation of beauty, which so often shines from within, but the contemplation of sectional anatomy.

The young ladies themselves are generally an inch away from nervous hysteria and the qualities that make them so admirable in other settings — demureness, sweetness, pensiveness and the rest, — are lost in what is a sort of humorless burlesque show.

If the communities must have a queen maybe it's time we stopped putting these girls into what ought to be a woman's job.

Why not, in fact, select a queen who possesses some more regal qualities than the baby-faced drum majorettes that are so often the choice?

Instead of the arbitrary standards of the tape measurement, the statistics of bust-waist-hip that have come to be the magical formula for the cheerleader type of beauty, why don't we grow up and select a queen, if we must, by some more durable tests?

We might, in fact, base the requirements on those standards of beauty outlined by Nicholas Egon, the British painter of lovely women, who spoke nothing but the truth when he observed: "Intelligent men are quickly bored by the kitten-like beauty of the young. A woman in her forties is very often more fascinating. She knows everything about herself, how to present herself, how to use her personality, how to radiate."

The quest for a queen with that quality would entail no modeling of bathing suits, but simply the quiet contemplation of a committee of intelligent men who can distinguish between the vacant-eyed pinup cutie and the truly high-voltage woman.

If any communities would like to try for that then I wouldn't mind being a judge, at all.

WOMAN TRAPPED AFTER CRASH

A 21-year-old Surrey woman, who was trapped for more than an hour early Saturday morning in the wreckage of a car that went off an isolated part of the West Coast Road, remains in poor condition in the intensive care unit at Victoria General Hospital today.

Pamela Gerow was taken to hospital Saturday, suffering from a fractured spine.

Three other occupants of the car were treated and released from hospital, and a fourth was unhurt.

The car, driven by Egbert Engelmann, was about five miles south of Port Renfrew when it left the gravel road, went over a bridge, fell about 12 feet and flipped on its roof, Sooke RCMP said.

The other occupants were able to scramble up the embankment and flag down a passing car to get help for Gerow who was later freed by Sooke RCMP and ambulance attendants.

Radar Tower Plan Well-Received

A proposed 70-foot radar tower atop Gonzales Hill, which Oak Bay aldermen criticized last month on its visual impact, has found a better reception from design experts in the city of Victoria.

The tower, says City Hall's Advisory Design Panel, is "aesthetically pleasing" and "will not detract from the amenities of nearby established residential properties."

Planned by the federal ministry of transport as the first of four marine radar installations to monitor the movement of large vessels from Race Rocks to Vancouver harbor, the tower would be adjacent and north of the meterological station of Denison Road.

It would be sited about 100 feet into the city side of the Victoria-Oak Bay boundary. Mounted on top of the 10-foot-wide column would be a superstructure about 30 feet across and eight feet deep.

When Oak Bay council viewed the plans at its April 21 meeting Ald. Shirley Dowell commented: "It's a space needle. It's terrible," and Ald. John Goult termed the structure "the answer to Victoria's water tower." A more glowing description, however, has been submitted in correspondence to the municipalities from D. H. MacLeod, regional manager for property services for the public works ministry.

"Introduction of a radar tower at Gonzales . . . would be aesthetically pleasing," he states. "Other hills in the vicinity of Gonzales have objects such as water towers, and this architecturally designed radar tower with its clean lines should offset the water tower look and become a beautiful landmark."

Victoria's land-use planning and zoning committee, which considers the proposal at its meeting Tuesday, will be told in a report by planning director Geoff Greenhalgh that the Advisory Design Panel concurs with that view.

Alphonse Quits as Head Of Friendship Centre

Cowichan Indian band chief Dennis Alphonse said today he is resigning at the end of this month as executive director of the Victoria Native Friendship Centre, 1292 Gladstone.

He said he will return to his band to devote more time to its affairs, including the possibility of establishing a food co-operative.

Alphonse has been chief of the Cowichan band for eight years and for the last three years has been with the Victoria Native Friendship Centre, an organization which helps native people adjust to urban living and provides an educational meeting place for Indian and non-Indian people to meet and get to know each other.

Another reason for resigning, he said, is because it is apparent the centre's board would not join a province-wide Indian movement to reject federal funding although the board hasn't made an official decision on this.

Indian bands and associations throughout B.C. recently decided to boycott federal funding as a means of cutting federal strings on Indian affairs.

He added that no replacement for him has been made by the Victoria Native Friendship Centre but the board is due to meet later this week.

It was one of the last few quiet moments before the annual Junior Chamber of Commerce fair was to open at 4 p.m. The fair continues until 11 p.m. Sunday.

Two CUPE Locals Need More Talks

Saanich administrators and union representatives held their first meeting Friday following rejection of an area-wide settlement of the capital region's three-month civic dispute.

Employees are back at work in all areas, but in Saanich and Esquimalt where membership held out for locally-oriented adjustments, further negotiations will be arranged.

Saanich Local 374 Canadian Union of Public Employees presented an eight-point counter-proposal in which the union seeks improvement to the middle range of inside workers' salaries, based on the area-wide proposal, changes in shift differential and premium pay for dirty jobs and modification of contract language in other areas.

The union was asked to make specific recommendations on the inside salary adjustments, which will take a little time to prepare, local president Jim Brett said.

No date was set for the next meeting.

In Esquimalt it was agreed that negotiations would follow determination of an issue before the Labor Relations Board, in which the union alleges illegal lockout by the municipality.

Man, 81, Dies In Blaze

Deputy R. J. Coates of the Victoria fire department said a call was received 12:06 a.m. today.

Coates said when firemen arrived at the home, heavy smoke was pouring out from all windows and as they laddered the building, a rear window blew out and the room burst into flames.

Firemen entered the room and extinguished flames.

"The bed clothes, bedding and mattress were consumed by fire and there is no doubt careless use of smoking materials started the fire," Coates said.

Victoria police said the cause of death has not yet been verified, but it is believed Moore died of smoke inhalation and severe burns.

Income Assurance Program For Greenhouse Growers

The provincial government has agreed to an income assurance program which will cover 20 greenhouse vegetable growers on the Saanich Peninsula.

The program, retroactive to April 1, 1974, 130 provincial greenhouse growers of tomatoes, long English cucumbers and white spine cucumbers.

Jack Wessel, B.C. Federation of Agriculture manager, said Saturday the program ensure virtually full payment for the first fiscal year because 95 per cent of the produce was marketed after April 1.

The federation was upset about three weeks ago during negotiations, he said, because the government seemed to be indicating it favored only half-payment for the year. But the differences were ironed out.

The plan for greenhouse growers is the fifth to be implemented in 1½ years, said Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich Other plans cover dairy, swine, field tomatoes and tree fruit programs.

Tomy Kavelaars, chairman of the federation's greenhouse growers' committee, said rapidly rising fuel, labor and other input costs have placed greenhouse vegetable producers in serious economic distress. The new plan, he said, should permit a gradual adjustment to the emerging economic environment.

Consumers will benefit by getting local supplies of tomatoes and cucumbers, he added.

The provincial government will pay two-thirds of the premiums, while producers pay one third into a fund used to pay indemnities to participating producers when market returns fall below an established cost or production.

Production costs are calculated on the basis of a model farm which uses modern, efficient techniques to get maximum productivity.
